BRITISH GET REINFORCEMENTS; READY FOR NEW TRIPOLI DRIVE

U.S. Destroyer Races Own Torpedoes To Attack Battleship

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12.—(AP)—At the height of a violent sea battle in the Solomons, the huge gray hulk of a Jap battleship came slashing through the darkness, her engines driving her at a speed of close to 25 knots.

In her path was the audacious U. S. S. Laffey, the first of a swift new series of destroyers.

The captain of the Laffey, Lieutenant Commander W. E. Hank, of Norfolk, Va., and her crew, were set for a kill that night. A few minutes earlier they had silenced the guns of a Jap cruiser. But this was bigger game.

The report of the 12th Naval District told today of the sea epic, of the battle that raged November 12 and 13.

The Laffey rocketed straight at the vast shape of the Jap battlewagon, her engines racing at "emergency full." To the crew of the destroyer it must have appeared that Commander Hank was hurling his vessel at the enemy battleship in a head-on suicide thrust. But he had other plans—plans that had to be true to the last decimal.

When the range was right Commander Hank let go with a salvo of torpedoes. But the Laffey was moving almost as fast as the torpedoes. And it was clear that with both ships heading at full speed for the same square yard of ocean, the destroyer was going to be there first. But by how much? Every man held his breath.

Misses Big Jap Battleship By Less Than 10 Feet

The Navy report said "as the bows crossed, an alert Jap on the forward deck could have tossed a hand grenade onto the deck of the destroyer." The margin was just over 10 feet. But the racing Laffey got clear in time. It appeared that two of the torpedoes hit the battleship.

And then, as a parting insult, the Laffey's four 5-inch guns were turned on the battleship's massive superstructure, focused on the bridge.

The bridge appeared literally to pulverize and blow away. "It was shot completely off the ship," the Navy stated.

The battleship started blazing away with secondary guns—she couldn't depress her larger batteries far enough—as the Laffey widened the range. Then the little destroyer found herself in deeper trouble. She had separated from her companion ships and was surrounded by the enemy. There was a battleship on her stern, a second on her port beam, and two large Jap destroyers on the port bow.

The Laffey and the two Jap destroyers opened fire simultaneously. The Laffey put one Jap out of action and left her burning briskly. But the other put a torpedo into our ship, and got a fair hit on the Laffey's deck.

No-Quarter Duel Fought At Point-Blank Range

The Laffey still had three of her 5-inch guns working, and turned them on the remaining Jap destroyer, in a no-quarter duel at point-blank range. Damage to both ships was tremendous. One after another the Laffey's guns were silenced. Finally she was down to a single big gun. But she kept on fighting. The Jap destroyer tried to creep away. But she exploded and sank.

The Laffey was left alone on the darkened sea. But she was a sorry sight of a ship, with all her guns silenced and a bad fire out of control. Then the Jap battleship whose bridge had been shot away straddled the Laffey with a salvo of 14-inchers. The destroyer was almost swamped by the splash.

The fire was burning without hope of recovery. The wounded men were put on life rafts; the others in life jackets. Commander Hank gave orders to abandon ship.

Commander Hank and three other officers were on deck forward. A medical officer was bringing up the last wounded man from sick bay. A violent explosion ripped the Laffey apart. The medical officer was trapped below; the captain was never seen again. The Laffey sank immediately.

Chief Dailey Freed By Jury in Tire Trial

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Jan. 12.—J. T. Dailey, chief of DeKalb county police, tonight was acquitted by a jury in federal court here of a conspiracy to illegally obtain rationed automobile tires in violation of OPA rules.

At the same time, the jury acquitted Roy Hall, international stock car racing champion, and Lewis Patrick Nelson, who were jointly indicted with Dailey.

The case reached the jury at 4:50 p. m. today, after a day of argument by defense and prosecution attorneys. The case went on trial here early last week, and the government contended that the trio had obtained tires on counterfeit part "B" ration certificates.

In its case, the government contended that some 1,000 tires, valued at from $15,000 to $20,000 on the present market, were thus unlawfully acquired.

Dailey and the other defendants denied the charges, or that they had any tires obtained as charged. Each took the stand to affirm his innocence.

Judge Robert L. Russell charged the jury and the verdict was returned after several hours.

Since his indictment several weeks ago, Chief Dailey has remained as head of the DeKalb police department, county officials saying they would not pass judgment until after his trial in Gainesville.

RELIEF LEADER DIES.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Edward Branch Lyman, 66, publicity director, who was manager of the Belgium relief fund which raised $2,000,000 for the relief of Belgium in the first World War, died today.

English, American And French Forces Deal Blows at Axis

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The British Eighth Army was reported about ready for a fresh spurt toward Tripoli tonight and its Anglo-American and French Allies in Tunisia, Fighting French in the Fezzan wastes of Lower Libya and their air forces dealt many and varied blows at the Axis in the Mediterranean theater.

The Morocco radio said strong reinforcements, including tank forces, had arrived in the last few hours to strengthen the forward elements of the Eighth Army before Wadi Zemzem, 160 airline miles southeast of Tripoli.

This possible indication that General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's forces were getting ready to resume their advance after a lull supplemented Berlin reports of Saturday night that thousands of Allied vehicles had been concentrated to the south of Marshal Erwin Rommel's positions for an attack.

Fighting French.

If an attack was imminent it obviously was in co-operation with the Fighting French of the mysterious General Jacques Leclerc who were reported within 300 miles of Tripoli after announcing a complete conquest of Italy's Fezzan empire of salt marsh, oases and desert in southern Libya.

Among the developments of the day which sharpened the picture in the Mediterranean were these:

American Flying Fortresses for the first time thundered into Tripolitania out of the west, and bombarded the Italian fort of Gadames, 170 miles southwest of Tripoli near the Libyan-Tunisian-Algerian border.

Putting the Axis under a two-way hammering from American four-motored bombers for the first time in a 24-hour cycle, the Fortresses' Liberator mates from the Cairo force slid over Naples on the Italian mainland by daylight yesterday for their first bombing of the embarkation point and naval base in 1943.

In Tunisia, just to the south of the German perimeter about Tunis and Bizerte, British and French patrols were more active than in days and fought several successful actions, a North African headquarters communique reported.

British infantry and tanks pushed the Germans off a ridge and settled themselves astride the arterial Goubellat road six miles north of Bou Arada and about 14 miles south of Medjez-el-Bab.

All of this came in the midst of information from reliable neutral sources from Germany that the Germans were engaged in a squabble over authority in Africa, with Marshal Rommel refusing to accept orders from General Walther Nehring in Tunisia ,and General Nehring refusing to knuckle under to Rommel. Failing to reconcile the two generals, it was reported, Adolf Hitler has appointed a third, Colonel General Juergen von Arnim, as commander in chief in Tunisia.

Admiral Standley Arrives in Moscow

MOSCOW, Jan. 12. — (AP) — Admiral William H. Standley arrived in Moscow in a Liberator bomber from Kuibyshev today after a three-month absence for consultation in Washington on closer war collaboration between the United States and the Soviet Union. Brigadier General Joseph A. Michela, military attache, and Rear Admiral Jack H. Duncan, naval attache, accompanied him.

Reds Advance On All Fronts; Close on Salsk

LONDON, Wednesday, Jan. 13. (AP)—Russian troops driving toward Rostov were reported early today within artillery range of Salsk, an important railway junction 110 miles to the southeast, while the Soviets in Moscow announced the capture of 10 more Caucasian settlements, and the killing of 2,000 Germans along the lower Don where the Nazis are counterattacking night and day.

Six villages, including Essentuki, or Yessentuki, Karras and Beshtaunit—all in the Pyatigorsk area—fell to the advancing Russians, the regular midnight communique said of the fighting along the Baku-Rostov railway skirting the northern slopes of the Caucasian mountains.

Another town which the Russians reported occupying was Levokumsy, about 75 miles northeast of Georgievsk, and the British news agency Reuters said that the Russian troops from the North Caucasus had joined forces near there with the Kalmyck steppes army which had been driving southwestward.

To the north the Russians took four more settlements in the area of Zimovniki on the Stalingrad-Tikhoretsk railway. The Red army's advance units are already beyond Kuberle, 150 miles southwest of Stalingrad on this railway, and less than 50 miles from Salsk.

Battle Nears Salsk.

Stockholm reports said that the Russians already were battling the Germans dug in northeast of Salsk, where a railway connects with Rostov to the northwest.

Along the lower Don river where the Russians last were reported about 60 miles east of Rostov, the Soviet communique also announced the capture of several localities, but did not identify them. For three days now the Russians have not claimed any specific gains in this area.

"The Germans are throwing in reserves in an effort to stem the Soviet advance at all costs," the communique said of this area where the Nazis were counterattacking day and night.

"Soviet troops wore out the enemy by their defense and followed up with a strong blow. Some 2,000 of the enemy were wiped out. Forty tanks and 12 enemy guns were destroyed. Booty and prisoners were captured."

Five Tanks Destroyed.

On the central front the Russians said their troops also repulsed Nazi counterattacks northwest of Velikie Luki, which is 80 miles from the Latvian border. Two enemy tanks were blown up by Soviet mines, and the remaining five used in this day-long fight were destroyed by Red antitank guns, the communique said. Two hundred German dead were reported left on the battlefield.

In another sector of the central front Soviet troops wiped out about one Nazi infantry company and destroyed 14 machineguns, one self-propelling gun, an ammunition dump and other material, the communique said.

Soviet tanks and cavalry were credited with a major part of the continuing successes in the Caucasus where the Russians said hundreds of additional Germans were captured along with quantities of ammunition. Cossack cavalrymen already have penetrated into the Kuban river region, Moscow reports said.

Fighting continued in Stalingrad itself where the communique said Red shock troops wrested several more streets from the Germans in the city's factory area.

GREETING THE CROWD—Ellis Arnall waved his hand to the crowd in response to an ovation when he stepped to the front of the platform at the state capitol yesterday to take the oath of office as the new Governor of Georgia. On the stand, left to right, are Joe Arnall, of Newnan, the new Governor's proud father; the Governor's four-year-old son, Alvan; the attractive new first lady of Georgia in a leopard skin coat; the new Governor and the widow of Judge Alvan Freeman, of Newnan. Judge Freeman taught Ellis Arnall law and politics.

Petrillo Offers To Lift Record Ban for F. D. R.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—James Caesar Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, told a senate committee today that only upon the request of the President would he permit his musicians to go back to making records.

Petrillo, who said that as a musician he played "the trumpet very quiet," emphatically trumpeted his grievances against recorded music as the creator of widespread unemployment within his union.

Upon his order, no recordings have been made since last August 1. Members of the Special Senate Investigating Committee repeatedly and pointedly criticized this ban. They said it was injuring the war effort, that it had gained no benefits for the union. They demanded that he state his objectives and upon what terms record-making would be resumed.

Beyond saying that he wanted more work for his musicians, and proposing to one questioner a licensing system which would bring performance royalties to the musicians who make the records, Petrillo refused to make a statement of his demands. But Petrillo's counsel, Joseph Padway, frankly told the committee that he feared the union would face an anti-trust suit, if such a statement were made. The broadcasters and record companies knew what the union wanted, he said.

Petrillo, excitable and voluble, was in an almost constant dispute with one committee member or another. His fuzzy, thinning hair awry, he sat sideways in the witness chair, with one elbow on the table before him serving as a pivot for a widely gesticulating arm. He ended all these encounters, however, with a grin, and often with a wisecrack.

Later, he said:

"If the President decided to stop the ban and continue to make transcriptions and recordings for the duration of the war, his request will be granted."

Governor's Mother Recalls Son's Youth

By CELESTINE SIBLEY.

A brown-eyed little woman with gray in her hair and tears of pride and happiness in her eyes, sat in the inaugural stand at the state capitol yesterday and heard the people of Georgia acclaim her boy their new Governor.

Her eyes were on his broad back, on the draped platform where he stood, on the thousands of uplifted faces before her—and her ears heard his deep voice saying, "I do solemnly swear . . ."

But the thoughts of Bessie Ellis Arnall went winging back 35 years to the sunny March day when the man who is to guide Georgia's destiny through the war years of the 1940's was born.

Mother Recalls.

"It was a beautiful day," Mrs. Arnall tilted her head in its modish hat of black Persian lamb and smiled in remembrance. "The only day in Ellis' life I think comparable to this one. He is my eldest child and I was so proud and happy and excited—and at the same time tired and kind of drained of emotion the way we all are today.

"As I sat out there today I guess I thought back through Ellis' entire life. He was a funny little boy, mischievous but hard-working and serious, too. He always worked so hard to accomplish anything he started I knew he'd succeed at anything he undertook.

"But you know," and here Mrs. Arnall's smile became a little apologetic and a little confidential, "I didn't really believe he'd grow up to be Governor of Georgia. He used to talk about it when he was just a little boy and all his life he has said he'd rather be Governor of Georgia than President of the United States. I know mothers sometimes have visions—but I'm sure I never really believed this day would come. There have been many times in Ellis' life when I was proud of him and elated over his success but this is a special feeling—like the day he was born."

Bessie Arnall's pretty daughter-in-law, Mildred Slemons Arnall, wife of the new Governor, walked out on the platform, her hand in that of her soon-to-be 5-year-old son, Alvan, with the same "special," indescribable feeling.

"I don't know what it's like," she confessed with a slow, infectious smile. "I know I'm proud and happy—but I don't know what else. A little scared, I guess."

Completely poised and self-possessed, the new first lady of Georgia seemed glad that her husband had decided to dispense with the reception and ball which usually follow inaugurations.

"Because of the war we're not going to have anything," she explained. "Alvan and I will stay with him today, and tomorrow I think we'll go back to Newnan. Alvan will be 5 next month, and since he's never had a birthday

Gene Talmadge Walks Out of Office at Noon

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

Eugene Talmadge has moved out, and a new Governor, Ellis Arnall, has moved in to administer the affairs of Georgia for the next four years.

Today business will begin to hum, in the executive offices of the state government and in the halls of the legislature, as work begins immediately on legal restoration of the government of Georgia to the people.

To a large crowd, swept by a cold wind, Governor Arnall yesterday pledged an administration of "intelligence, honesty, fair play, decency and democracy"—and the crowd cheered.

The new Govenor started to work immediately.

For two hours after the inaugural ceremonies in front of the state capitol, Governor Arnall held open house, receiving the congratulations of hundreds of well-wishers.

As the crowds thinned out late in the afternoon, he sat down to the desk Eugene Talmadge had just vacated and administered the oath of office to four assistant attorneys-general who will start work today under Attorney General T. Grady Head.

Governor Arnall then ordered that inventories be prepared by Purchasing Agent Carson Smith and State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. on all state-owned property in the executive offices and the state mansion.

This one official act of ordering

City, State Leaders Join Drive For $20,000,000 for Cruiser

By FRANK DRAKE.

Atlanta's campaign to replace the U. S. S. Atlanta got off to a racehorse start yesterday, with dozens of organizations shoving the machinery into high, and with a flood of assurances from Washington that a new "Atlanta" will soon slide down the ways to be in at the kill for the Japs that sank her namesake.

The Navy Public Relations Department started efforts to have Captain Samuel P. Jenkins, commander of the sunken Atlanta, come here as soon as he can arrange it, and plans were being made all along the line for important dignitaries of the military services and Washington officialdom to participate personally in the Atlanta drive.

Mayor Hartsfield, suggesting that citizens buy "Atlanta War Bonds" during the campaign, issued a proclamation urging everyone, everywhere, to join and buy War Bonds designating them as the ones to pay for a new cruiser named for this city.

Constitution Phones Busy.

The Constitution's phones were kept busy yesterday, ringing with the questions of leading citizens, organizations, and just plain people—"How can I help."

Today, the answer to that question will be given. Carlyle Fraser, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, said he will announce this morning selection of a chairman to head a "New Atlanta" committee, and that committee, co-operating in every way with the Treasury Department of the United States, will be the spearhead of that drive.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce also announced yesterday that all of the facilities of that organization would be thrown behind the campaign. Fred Sington, president of the Jaycees, announced after conferring with other leaders of the group that the organization and the abilities of all members would be joined together for the work.

Meanwhile, such organizations as the Civil Air Patrol, the Atlanta Order of Ahepa, civic clubs, private businesses and individuals indicated their intention of doing "everything we can" toward raising some $20,000,000 in war bonds, or such amount as is needed, to pay for a new Atlanta cruiser.

Russell Wires Support.

"We have every assurance that another cruiser will be named the Atlanta, and I wish you every success in the campaign to sell the bonds to pay for her construction," wired Senator Richard B. Russell yesterday. "A man of war bearing the name of the capital city of Georgia must be in on the capitulation of Tokyo and the final kill of the Japs."

And from Representative Carl

Complete Text of Governor Arnall's Speech at Inauguration

Honest Government Administration Aim

Here is the text in full of the inaugural address of Ellis Arnall, delivered yesterday after he had taken the oath of office as Georgia's new governor.

Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, Members of the General Assembly and Fellow Georgians:

Georgia was founded 210 years ago. Since that time, 70 men have served as governor, the highest office within the gift of the people of the state. The number includes colonial, provincial, provisional, military and constitutional chief executives.

I deem it a great honor to be inaugurated Governor of this, the Empire State of the south. Born in Georgia, I hope that it may be my lot to die here among the people I love and who mean so very much to me.

LOFTY IDEALS.

Those patriots who preceded us as dwellers in our great state, looking ahead through the years, conceived it to be their duty to perpetuate the principles of free government, to insure justice to all and to promote the interest and happiness of the people. And so it was that they, relying upon the protection and guidance of Almighty God, covenanted together that they would transmit to posterity the enjoyment of liberty and democracy. Hence, came about the lofty ideals upon which Georgia's state government was established.

SEVENTY-FIRST GOVERNOR.

Upon our inauguration as the 71st Governor, we proclaim again the fundamental truths that all government, of right, originates with the people, is founded upon their will only and is instituted solely for the good of the whole.

Public officials are trustees and servants of the people, and, at all times, are amenable to them.

The legislative, judicial and executive branches of government must forever remain separate and distinct, and no person discharging the duties of one, should, at the same time, exercise the functions of either of the others.

It will have been my proud privilege to have served in each of the co-ordinate constitutional branches of our state government. In the legislative, as a presiding officer for four years in the house of representatives; in the judicial, as attorney general for four years; and now, in the executive, as Governor for the first four-year term. Georgia has been good to me!

APPRECIATES CONFIDENCE.

On this occasion I am deeply conscious of the confidence which the people have placed in me by choosing me as Governor to serve them during the most critical time in the history of our state. We must constantly endeavor by our acts and deeds to keep alive this confidence, to replenish it, to encourage its growth, to the end that the people of Georgia may feel that their government is as good as that of any state in the Union.

My election was brought about by a crusading determination on the part of the people that Georgia should have good government. I was only the instrument through which the people achieved their victory.

The new state administration will be the people's administration. It will not be dominated or controlled by any little crowd of scheming, selfish politicians or groups who clamor for special privileges which they want granted to themselves yet denied to others.

A BETTER LAY FOR GEORGIA.

The people of Georgia are looking to this administration to steer the ship of state on a straighter course. They are looking to us in the hope that we may be able to inaugurate a new and a better day for Georgia.

Our success will depend upon the co-operation we receive from the members of the general assembly and from the people themselves.

The new assembly is composed of some of the finest of our citizens. It consists of a group of patriotic, sincere, hard-working Georgians, and I am confident that we may count upon the general assembly to do those things which the people want accomplished.

CO-OPERATION WITH BUSINESS.

The business people of Georgia, large and small, need have no fear of this assembly, or any member of it undertaking to penalize them by aiming pernicious legislation at any legitimate business in Georgia.

This legislature will be free from suspicion that any member of it would resort to "shakedown" methods in dealing with legislation.

Business may justly have confidence in the present administration and, likewise, the members of the assembly and the officials of the state, I believe, may feel assured that the business people of Georgia will be happy to co-operate with us in meeting and solving our state governmental problems.

It is unfortunate that during recent periods when the state's revenue reached unprecedented all-time highs that no surplus was put aside for a rainy day.

I am not critical of what has been done. I am willing to cheerfully accept the responsibility of undertaking to operate the state government, with the help of the general assembly, efficiently, economically, honestly and well.

CRITICAL TIME.

We take the state government at a critical time. The state debt stands at $35,961,630.38. The outlook for income yield from our tax system is indeed dark. Gasoline tax revenues continue to fall off drastically. Our income tax receipts, due to a state law authorizing federal deductions, will show a tremendous decrease. The uncertainties of the future are more uncertain each day, but we will do our best with a most difficult situation.

If the professional politicians force us into the corner, we will strike back by stating our case clearly before the bar of public opinion, and with the help of the people we will dissipate any obstruction that the politicians may attempt to place in our path.

TO VETO TAX INCREASE.

I have pledged myself to veto any bill designed to increase taxes. Today, I reiterate that pledge. This is no time for the state government to undertake to increase the tax load on our people who are already heavily burdened with increased federal taxes—taxes which are necessary to successfully prosecute the war.

The most serious concern of us all is the winning of the war. A war that is intended to destroy our system of democratic government. A war that is intended to destroy our freedom, the pursuit of happiness and the independence of mankind.

The fight raging throughout the world is a conflict between the democratic concept of life and government and that of absolutism or dictatorship. The days which lie ahead will bring increased privation to our people. The state government, like individuals, will be compelled to retrench and economize but we shall do it gladly.

SUPPORT OF WAR EFFORT.

So, I hope that the first order of business of the general assembly will be to adopt a resolution committing the state administration to a policy of full and complete co-operation with the government of the United States and our commander in chief in the waging and winning of the war.

It is hoped that the general assembly will see fit to speedily enact a measure reorganizing the State Board of Regents together with a companion measure establishing a constitutional Board of Regents which will ever be immune and free from political interference and control.

When this is done, the University System of Georgia will quickly be restored to full fellowship in the various accrediting agencies and associations. I envy the general assembly the privilege which is theirs of bringing about the restoration of standing to our beloved University System.

It is my recommendation that the State Board of Education be reorganized and a constitutional board speedily created.

EDUCATION OUR SOLUTION

Education is the hope of the future. It is the salvation of our people. It is the cure for ignorance, poverty, prejudice, hatred and demagoguery. Your new state administration will go "all-out" for education, for our teachers and for our boys and girls.

PARDON AND PAROLE.

We urge the general assembly to establish a modern and efficient pardon and parole system in our state, giving clemency power to a non-political board and taking it away from the governor. This will require a statute anda constitutional amendment.

It is my recommendation to the assembly that the law authorizing the governor to remove the comptroller general and the state treasurer be repealed; that the state auditor be elected by the legislature; that a representative finance commission be created to aid the governor who will have the responsibility of keeping state expenditures within the limits of state income; that the general assembly again make appropriations as the constitution of our state provides; that the governor be removed from membership on various state boards and commissions, and that the power be removed from the governor to strike from the budget, arbitrarily and without just cause, the names of efficient state employes.

THE 10-POINT PROGRAM.

These proposals constitute, in effect, the 10-point program which the people ratified when they nominated and elected me governor.

There are other legislative matters which, it seems to me, require favorable and prompt consideration by the general assembly.

TEACHER RETIREMENT.

A system of teacher retirement should be submitted to the people in the form of a constitutional amendment for ratification. The men and women who spend their lives teaching our children, building their characters, developing their minds and furthering their interests, certainly deserve special consideration at the hands of the state.

LIMIT CAMPAIGN EXPENSES

It is my firm belief that the assembly should enact a measure limiting campaign expenses for governor in primary and general election contests.

It is outrageous that one is required to spend such a tremendous amount of money in order to be elected Governor of our state. Had it not been for an aroused public opinion, it would have been utterly impossible for me to have obtained the financial support which was necessary to win the governorship. We must not let it get to where only rich men can run for Governor. I believe the people of Georgia will applaud legislation limiting campaign expenses for this office.

ATTORNEY GENERAL POWER INCREASE.

We need to enlarge the power of the attorney general so that he may be authorized to investigate irregularities in state departments and to stop corruption in state government whenever it shows its ugly head. The glaring defect in the laws of our state in this particular should be remedied.

OTHER PROPOSALS.

It is my recommendation to the general assembly that a nonpolitical game and fish commission be created and placed in control of the affairs of the Wildlife Department; that our State Patrol be reorganized along more economical and more efficient lines; and that our State Guard be improved and set up by specific statute.

The general assembly has a fine opportunity to show the nation that we, in Georgia, stand behind the national government in the war effort by speedily enacting the defense measures which were passed by the 1941 legislature, but which never became law.

I recommend to the assembly that it cause to be submitted to the people a constitutional amendment lowering the voting age in Georgia to 18. If our boys and girls at 18 are old enough to fight and die for freedom, liberty and blessings which are ours today, then certainly they are old enough to participate in the affairs of the government they serve.

Our administration must give sympathetic study to the problems of agriculture and must see to it that agricultural pursuits in Georgia are furthered and promoted.

We must make our veterans' service office more helpful to the veterans; we must increase the efficiency of civilian defense; we must keep in mind how very necessary is our public health work.

Our natural resources must be developed. Social security activities and our eleemosynary institutions must be carried on as serviceably and as efficiently as possible.

FAIR TO LABOR AND CAPITAL.

The state government must be fair to capital, labor and industry.

We must strive to attract to Georgia those who live beyond the borders of our state.

We must constantly work for the development of Georgia on a sound and progressive basis.

We align the new administration with the cause of intelligence, honesty, fair play, decency and democracy. We will work against demagoguery, ignorance, hatred, prejudice and wrong-doing.

NEW JOBS.

I ask my loyal and true friends not to unduly bring requests to me for jobs. It is not our purpose to undertake to find employment for all of our friends by attaching them to the state pay roll.

I urge the people to assist me in dislodging the idea that a state job is merely a hand-out with big pay and no work. I hope the people of Georgia, and my friends in particular, will discourage the political job-seekers from monopolizing our time and embarrassing us with requests for employment—requests which cannot be granted.

WILL MAKE OWN APPOINTMENTS.

I want it clearly understood that I intend to make my own appointments. No one is authorized to speak for me. It saddens me to realize that already lifelong friendships are being broken because I will not agree to appoint some particular friend to a public office. The people must help me, especially my friends, in being hardboiled about the job and appointment business. I ask your help in making it easy for me.

We will be compelled to retrench and cut to the bone. Extravagance must be discouraged. We must reorganize, consolidate, abolish and streamline many of our state departments.

State highway construction, through necessity, must be stopped.

Those who took road contracts knowing full well that the state would not be in a financial position to fulfill them, and those who are now working so frantically in an effort to complete projects, knowing that the state treasury is depleted, have need to be cautious. They acted and act at their own peril.

AN HONEST ADMINISTRATION

We will have an honest administration for the next four years.

If any citizen of Georgia learns of graft, irregularities or corruption in the state government, I want to know about it. Here and now I emphatically state that I shall be the first to expose anyone connected with my administration, no matter how near or dear to me he may be, who profits, racketeers or thrives on unjust gains or "deals" at the state's expense. Not only will he be exposed but he will be swiftly punished.

No one need employ lobbyists to get the ear of those with whom they would confer. No one need employ emissaries to see the Governor. I will be available to the people, to the humblest and highest citizens of this state alike, at my office in the state capitol.

HOME LIFE.

We will be glad to see our friends at the executive mansion when they come there socially, but I hope that our friends will realize that the mansion will be our home and not a business office. Certainly, the Governor and his family deserve some degree of home life, small though that degree may be.

It is my sincere belief that if the general assembly will speedily enact necessary measures and wind up its affairs prior to the time fixed by law for adjournment, the people of Georgia will feel that the legislature and the administration have rendered the type of workmanlike serious service which the times demand.

As Governor, I am going to take the general assembly into my confidence and I hope that the members will take me into theirs so that we may better work together for the welfare of our state.

NO GENIUS.

Since the election I have frequently told the people that I am no extraordinary man. I have no great capacity or great ability. I pose as no genius. I am just an ordinary fellow who wants to do a good job for Georgia. The times require a good job by us all.

I desire to thank those countless friends who so loyally campaigned to secure for me this chance to serve as chief executive.

To the newspapers, the women, the students and the boys and girls of Georgia go my particular thanks.

On this day which marks the beginning of a new state administration which rises with bright hope; which rises with great opportunity for service; which rises with full realization that serious days are ahead and much needs to be done; I am conscious that the success of it, and my success, will depend upon holding fast to those things which are true, to those things which are honest, to those things which are just, and to those things which are of good report.

WITH GOD'S HELP.

In my heart, "I said to a man who stood at the gate of the years, 'Give me a light, that I may tread safely into the unknown', and he replied, 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than a light and safer than a known way'."

And so, with God's help, we will do our best for Georgia!

Newnan Gives Arnall 'Horseshoe'

A giant horseshoe made of 35 purple, white and yellow orchids and 480 American beauty roses was presented to Governor Arnall by the people of his home town as an "emblem of good luck and a token of love and esteem."

Mayor C. J. Smith, of Newnan, made a brief presentation speech to let the governor know that his neighbors and friends sent flowers "to tell you that you are upheld in your high purpose by their confidence in you because of those qualities which you possess that spring from good rearing, good sense and moral resolve."

The floral horseshoe, made by a Newnan florist to fit the truck which was to haul it up here, contained more than $200 worth of flowers.

OPA Postpones Deadline for Tire Inspection

Modified Program Also To Provide Less Frequent Examinations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The Office of Price Administration modified today its periodic tire inspection program by postponing the January 31 deadline for the first inspection, and providing for less frequent examinations.

The action was taken, OPA said, to minimize public inconvenience and to smooth out occasional work peaks for the inspectors.

A stagger system was put into effect so that there will be three different deadlines for the first inspection.

Under the revised program, all holders of basic gasoline ration A coupons will have until the end of March for their first tire inspection, and subsequent inspections will be once in each six months, instead of the former requirement of once every four months.

Motorists with B or C supplementary books or bulk coupons for fleets will be required to get their first inspections by the end of February. After that, inspections for B bookholders will be once in every four months, and for C bookholders and bulk coupon holders once every three months. Formerly the schedule called for examinations of cars with B and C rations once in two months.

In announcing the changes, Paul M. O'Leary, deputy OPA administrator in charge of rationing, said tire conservation now will depend more heavily upon voluntary co-operation by motorists.

O'Leary urged motorists not to wait for the deadlines, but to have their tires inspected as soon as possible.

An announcement of a similar postponement on inspection of truck and commercial car tires was expected later today, from the Office of Defense Transportation. Commercial tires now have a January 15 inspection deadline, but the date probably will be put off for several weeks.

New Medal For Goering On Birthday

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Reichsmarshal Goering, who already possesses most of the medals which can be conferred upon him by Germany and her European Axis puppets, made a place for a new one today on his fiftieth birthday. Hungary has awarded him the Grand Cross of the Order of Merit.

Alfred Rosenberg, Reichsminister for the German-occupied districts in the east, also marked his fiftieth birthday today.

There were no large official ceremonies for either of the Nazi leaders, but press and radio noted the day.

The German press described Goering as Germany's sword and Rosenberg as Germany's thinker.

New Algiers Arrests Revealed as Giraud Cleans Up in Africa

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, North Africa, Jan. 12.—(AP) The Christmas Eve assassination of Admiral Jean Darlan, the late high commissioner of North Africa, appears to have been the "result of a conspiracy reaching in many directions" and additional "personages of Algiers" have been arrested in the case, a spokesman for General Henri Giraud, the admiral's successor, announced tonight.

HE PACKED THE STREET CARS—Alexander Borovsky, famous Russian pianist, played last night to the largest crowd the Music Club Series has drawn this season despite transportation difficulties and a blackout at curtain time.

A number of those arrested early in the investigation have been released, however, said the spokesman, who replied that he could not forecast the trend of the inquiry when he was asked if a French monarchist group headed by the Count of Paris had figured in the case.

At the same time another announcement of great political importance in the future of North Africa was made by the spokesman, who said General Giraud will meet General Charles de Gaulle, the Fighting French leader, in the near future in an effort to reach a working agreement for the two French forces.

The official spokesman, who addressed a press conference after the city of Algiers had seethed for two days with rumors of the arrest of many prominent persons in the Darlan murder, stressed throughout that the investigation was being made by the military authorities and was proceeding "without consideration of the prominence of the persons involved, nor their political beliefs."

"The murder of Darlan possibly was political, but the investigation and trial will be conducted merely as that of a criminal for a crime needing punishment," he said.

Those who now have been arrested will be tried by a military tribunal composed of five judges, the spokesman said.

He made it clear that the new persohages arrested were in addition to the 12 whom Giraud announced on New Year's Eve had been seized in a plot to kill himself and Robert Murphy, President Roosevelt's personal minister in North Africa. General Giraud at the time said some of the 12 were personal friends and others had aided the Allied landing last November and participated in a secret rendezvous with United States Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark.

The spokesman said in some cases the questioning of the 12 had led to new arrests.

Music Lovers Are Thrilled By Borovsky

Atlantans Ride Buses, Street Cars To Attend Pianist's Concert.

By EUGENIA BRIDGES HARTY.

Atlanta Music Club subscribers swarmed off buses and streetcars stopping in the vicinity of the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium last night to prove that hereabouts there are plenty of music lovers.

Alexander Borovsky, the distinguished Russian pianist, played to the largest house the Atlanta Music Club Series has seen this season. And 15 minutes before curtain time, a blackout had been signaled. What with this and that, the small group of earlybirds, who sat in the darkened hall, wondered. Would anyone else turn up?

The audience elbowed its way in almost simultaneously a few minutes after the all clear signal. The artist, a singularly inspired exponent of Bach, began his program with Prelude and Fugue for Organ in A Minor by this composer, arranged by Liszt. He followed with Scarlatti's "Pastorale" and "Sonata in A Major." But the latter ran a close second for a few minutes to the auditorium's heating plant. The steam pipes accompanied at full orchestra. They might well have been commanded by Maestro Leinsdorf's baton.

"Another obstacle!" laughed the pianist and, biding his time, began over. Such good humor was a welcomed surprise from so established an artist. One could not but compare his finesse with the temperament of a De Pachman who was wont to glare and fume if a cough was heard. Or with the prima donna, who, upon hearing a whisper in the front row, stopped in the middle of her aria at the municipal auditorium. "Shall I go on or will you?" she asked the offender.

The artist displayed forceful, brilliant technique in Beethoven's "Sonata in F minor," as he did in all his work. Yet, his pianissimo tones are caressing. A seasoned virtuoso, he nevertheless tackles his instrument with the vigor of an auditionist at the Olympic tryouts. His is a showmanship of the old school. And he has all the requisites to back it up. There were no refunds requested at the box-office afterward, either. The house thundered its thanks.

WAVES Seek Quarters at The Biltmore

Navy Would House 500 Women in Hotel Here, Ramspeck Says.

D. O. Beusse, vice president and general manager of the Atlanta Biltmore, announced yesterday he had been contacted by the U. S. Navy in regard to obtaining quarters at the hostelry for a WAVES base. It is planned that the women use 25 rooms, three to a room, until barracks are constructed at the Naval Air Base to house the WAVES. It was reported that as one group of WAVES complete their training another group of 25 would replace them.

However, Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, in Washington said yesterday one entire floor of the hotel would be taken over by the Navy for a training school for WAVES.

Ramspeck said he had been advised by Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, that the Navy planned to house 500 WAVES in the hotel.

Ramspeck said he had no details as to when the Navy would move into the hotel.

Vinson could not be reached immediately.

The Navy announced that the WAVES to be stationed in Atlanta would undergo training at the Atlanta Naval Aviation Base for qualification as Link trainer instructors after taking preliminary training at boot camp.

Link trainnig devices are used in teaching the fundamentals of instrument or blind flying to novice fliers.

Major C. C. Brayton, recently back from Washington, D. C., in regard to the situation, asserted last night he thought "the problem would be ironed out in three days." "I don't know anything for certain," he said.

Place To Sleep Worries Labor Parley Group

Fire Stations To Be Opened for 3-Day Conference Here.

A three-day housing plan, which contemplates use of firemen's sleeping quarters and even cots spread in the municipal auditorium, was being worked out by American Federation of Labor officials in anticipation of their big war - labor - industry conference here Friday through Sunday.

Southern Representative George Googe said Fire Chief C. C. Styron had offered space in the upper floors of engine houses to help accommodate the overflow from hotels which cannot handle all of the 5,000 expected delegates from 12 southern states.

Civilian defense and Army authorities, it was hoped would furnish cots and blankets for the visitors, and hotels were turning sample rooms, auditoriums and meeting rooms into temporary barracks.

Googe announced yesterday that Navy Secretary Frank Knox had officially confirmed Rear Admiral Clark Howell Woodward, head of the Navy's incentive division, as his personal representative at the conference in which the federation hopes to get a cross-section of ideas as to how the war may best be prosecuted.

Woodward, outspoken columnist, advocate of naval power and native Atlantan, will be joined by other national leaders at the conference, including President William Green, of the AFL; Man-Power Commissioner Paul V. McNutt and a representative of War Secretary Henry Stimson. Senator George also is expected to discuss financial aspects of the war effort.

Main sessions will be held in the municipal auditorium but others will be held at meeting places all over the city, Googe said.

"There are many problems and misunderstandings facing industry, capital and labor in this war," he added, "and we want to hear them all."

Immediately after the conference, southern state federations will adopt policies and programs based on information gained from the discussions.

Allies Advance Against Japs' Holdout Force

Papuan Campaign Called 'Ended With Enemy Destroyed.'

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Wednesday, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Allied ground forces gained against the only Japs still holding out in the Papuan peninsula of New Guinea at Sanananda, the high command announced today.

Only a fragment of the one-time Jap Papuan army of 15,000 still clings to that point west of Buna and its situation has been viewed as so hopeless that General Douglas MacArthur returned from the field last week to his Australia headquarters, indicating that to all intents and purposes that campaign has ended with the Jap army's destruction.

"Our ground forces made further gains against the remaining enemy positions," the noon communique said concerning Sanananda.

Long-range bombers and attack planes raided what is regarded as the next probably sector of ground action, the Lae-Salamaua area northwest of Buna. The planes bombed and strafed the trail to Komiatum, destroying a bridge.

Another formation strafed the New Guinea coast as far as Amboga.

Allied long-range fighters returned to a much-raided point, Fuiloro, in Portuguese Timor, destroying an enemy fighter on the ground and carrying out successful low-level strafing of buildings and motor transport.

The Japs also raided a point they have been giving increasing attention, Merauke, on the south coast of Dutch New Guinea. Nine of their bombers inflicted what the communique described as "only slight damage" on the town.

70,000 Nazis Now in Tunisia, Giraud Warns

Allies Face Well-Fitted Opponent, French Leader Says.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Jan. 11.—(Delayed)—(AP)—General Henri Giraud, French high commissioner in North and West Africa, declared in a speech today that 70,000 Germans have arrived in Tunisia and now oppose the Allied forces.

"A well-equipped army that fights well is facing the Anglo-American troops, and also the French army," he said in addressing officials at Niamey in the desert before reaching Algiers yesterday.

Allied operations might have been more rapid but the "price would have been out of proportion to the results," considering the terrain and the importance of the Axis positions, he said.

Atlanta To Have Aid in Cruiser Drive, Treasury Tells George

Knox Expected To Approve City's Drive

Navy Day Committee May Be Revived To Handle Campaign.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Constitution Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—High Treasury officials today assured Senator George that both the Treasury and the Navy departments will co-operate fully with Atlanta's campaign for raising enough money through purchase of government war bonds to replace the cruiser Atlanta, which was sunk in the Pacific.

In due time, Senator George said, proper statements will be forthcoming from Secretary of the Navy Knox and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau. They will be address to President Carlyle Fraser, of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and Roy Gentry, of the Coca-Cola Company, who was chairman of the past Georgia Navy Day Committee, and which it is expected will be revived to aid in the drive.

Praising The Constitution for initiating the drive, Treasury officials said it was up to Atlanta to outdo the city of Houston, Texas, which subscribed $85,000,000 in war bonds in a similar campaign after the cruiser Houston was lost earlier in the war.

"We will see how Atlanta makes out in the drive," a spokesman for the department told the Georgia senator.

Congress Delegation to Aid.

Meantime ample assurances were forthcoming today from members of the Georgia delegation in congress that a new and bigger cruiser will be named for Atlanta to take the place of the one lost in the Solomons area.

Representative Robert Ramspeck, of Atlanta, and Representative Carl Vinson, of Milledgeville, the latter chairman of the important House Naval Affairs Committee, conferred with Navy Department officials during the day and said later there was no doubt of having another war vessel named after Georgia's capital city.

"I have been given ample assurance that the city of Atlanta will continue to be represented in the register of the Navy," Representative Ramspeck said.

Will Be Larger Ship.

Representative Vinson said the new cruiser Atlanta would be even larger than the one which Margaret Mitchell christened upon its launching in 1941. "It will be a 10,000-ton vessel, the largest class of cruisers built," he said.

The entire Georgia delegation, including both Senator George and Senator Richard B. Russell, joined in warmly commending the campaign to raise funds in Georgia for replacing the Atlanta. All or most of them sent telegraphic messages during the day to Clark Howell, publisher of The Constitution, praising the effort.

Although the ill-fated Atlanta was listed as a vessel of only 6,000 tons at the time it was launched, Representative Vinson revealed today that the ship actually was much larger than this. When finally fitted out for war service it actually was nearer 9,000 tons, he said, making it one of the most powerful vessels in the cruiser class.

Houston Record High.

If Atlanta accepts the challenge of Treasury officials as relayed through Senator George, it will have to go some to equal the record of Houston, which raised more than four times the amount initially suggested for the city.

When the War Bonds ceremony was finally held in Houston a notable array of government officials were on hand to receive evidence of the city's feat. Secretary Knox and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, who comes from Houston, were present to take part in the ceremonies.

Undoubtedly a similar program will be arranged for Atlanta when the campaign is ended.

Representative Vinson started the drive among Georgians in Washington by being the first to announce the personal subscription of $500 in War Bonds towards the goal. Others here are expected to do likewise.

TREATING SEED.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 12.—Treatment of cotton seed before planting has increased in popularity in Georgia during the past five years, according to the Georgia Agricultural Extension Service. County agents estimate that 61 per cent of the seed planted in 1942 was treated.

Armless Tom Powell was declared champion gardener of the district at the annual horticultural show in Denham, England.

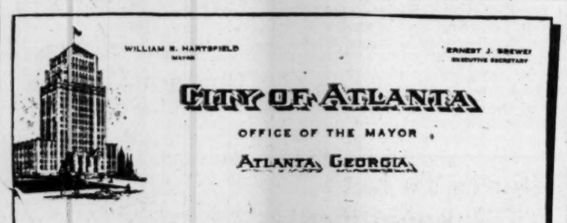
Here's How I Licked Wartime Constipation!

It was easy after I was told it's often due to lack of "bulk"

"Seems like I was always 'dosing' up on account of constipation. That sort of stuff gets a fellow down.

"Then a friend pointed out that these war days were upsetting our whole way of living. Particularly in how we eat. Said I ought to take care, my meals were properly balanced—and make sure I got plenty of 'bulk.' Because lack of 'bulk' is one of the common causes of wartime constipation. Those medicinal laxatives gave me only temporary relief; they didn't get at the cause.

"But, KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN really fixed me up. It corrects this kind of constipation by supplying 'bulk.' And it tastes swell, too. Just eat it regularly and drink plenty of water. ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek."



WILLIAM B. HARTSFIELD, MAYOR — ERNEST J. BREWER, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY

CITY OF ATLANTA
OFFICE OF THE MAYOR
ATLANTA, GEORGIA

This is a call to all Atlantans wherever located in every part of the nation or abroad. We want to roll up the greatest subscription ever attained in the history of our city to replace with a bigger and mightier ship, the cruiser Atlanta, of which we were so proud. Let us exemplify the seal of Atlanta which is the fabled Phoenix rising from the flames and soaring away to future power and greatness.

Not only is this a test of Atlanta's war spirit but it affords an opportunity for all who love Atlanta in distant parts of the county and even in foreign climes to come in and have a part, both in avenging the sinking of Atlanta's namesake and putting upon the high seas once more the proud name of the City of Atlanta.

To this end the City of Atlanta officially pledges every resource at its command, and calls upon every citizen far and near to join with one another in the firm resolve that a new Atlanta shall have the privilege of steaming proudly into the harbor of Tokyo.

Mayor
City of Atlanta

This, the 12th day of January, 1943.

"ATLANTANS ANYWHERE"—Mayor Hartsfield issued this proclamation yesterday calling on Atlantans everywhere, to buy "Atlanta War Bonds" to help replace the "Atlanta" cruiser that was lost. His call was a keynote as practically everybody in the city began planning how to help. The Chamber of Commerce will form the nucleus for the big campaign.

Two Georgians Killed in Sinking Of Cruiser Atlanta

One Atlantan and one Georgian lost their lives in the sinking of the cruiser Atlanta and more than a dozen Atlantans were saved, a checkup revealed yesterday. One Atlantan, Lieutenant Commander Byron B. Newell, of 1002 Cumberland road, N. E., whose wife is an instructor in the Link training school at the Naval Air Station, was reported lost in the sinking of the Aircraft Carrier Hornet.

Ensign Ashley D. Morris, husband of Mrs. Edith Barber Morris, of 560 Melrose drive, and Chief Warrant Officer O. O. Cleveland, of Cedartown, Ga., whose sister, Mrs. F. P. Abercrombie, lives at 1129 Arlington avenue, S. W., were killed in action aboard the Atlanta, according to telegrams received by their relatives.

Survivors of the Atlanta included:

Lieutenant Commander Carl C. Garver, whose wife lives at 1302 Emory road, N. E.

Frank J. Leiker, whose uncle, Ernest S. Brown, lives at 2177 North Decatur road.

Bill Smith, son of Mrs. F. S. Smith, 1167 Stewart avenue, N. W.

Holt Hertwig, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Hertwig, 916 Greenwood avenue.

Bill Busby, son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Busby, 3400 Lee street, Egan.

J. W. Davis, of Egan.

Harry Chester Jackson, son of Pomp Jackson, 448 Oak drive, Hapeville.

Forrest E. Moulder, son of Mrs. A. P. Patty, 309 North avenue, northeast.

Lonnie Clyde Hardy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hardy, 47 Annie street, Scotdale, wounded, and now in a San Francisco hospital.

C. H. Brannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Brannon, 378 Richardson street, S. W. (Reported wounded, but well now.)

Bill DuPree, son of Mrs. Lillian DuPree, 1100 Piedmont avenue. (Believed to be aboard Atlanta).

Robert T. Shaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Shaw, 268 Memorial drive, S. E. (Believed on Atlanta).

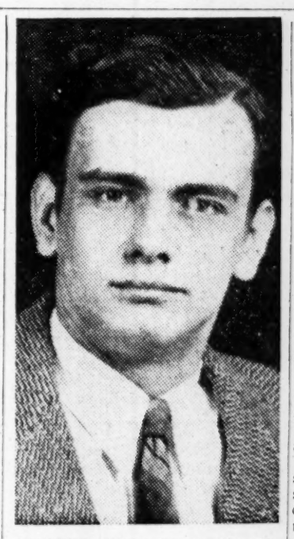
Carl Eckman, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Eckman, of 2172 Cascade road, was saved when the aircraft carrier Hornet was sunk.

Ensign Morris had been aboard the Atlanta since she put to sea last April. The 25-year-old Atlantan, who attended Georgia Tech for a year and graduated an honor student from the University of Georgia, chose the Atlanta after receiving his commission. He was the son of Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Morris, of Pearson, Ga.

Chief Warrent Officer Cleveland had been in the Navy for 21 years, and recently was promoted to the rating of chief warrant officer. He was a gunnery officer, Mrs. Abercrombie said. He has a brother in the Navy—Hugh A. Cleveland, who is aboard another ship.

Families and relatives of the survivors knew they had been saved, having received letters from them since the sinking of the Atlanta, but none except those visited by the survivors had heard any details of the battle.

Bill Smith was the only survivor of the Atlanta home on leave when the closely guarded secret was announced by the Navy. He told of the battle in an interview printed in yesterday's Constitution after the news was released Monday night.



SAVED—Holt Hertwig, of Atlanta, was saved when the cruiser Atlanta went down during a battle off Guadalcanal island.

SURVIVOR — Lieutenant Commander Carl C. Garver, medical officer aboard the Atlanta. He is expected home at an early date.

KILLED IN ACTION—Ensign Ashley D. Morris, of Atlanta, was killed in action aboard the Atlanta in the battle which sank her.

SAFE—Forrest E. Moulder, son of Mrs. A. P. Patty, of Atlanta, wrote his mother he was safe after the sinking of the Atlanta. He was 19 years old Monday.

Mother Laughs and Weeps Too At News Atlanta Son Is Safe

"I want to laugh and smile, but I can't help crying, too, I'm so happy," Mrs. James E. Busby, of 3400 Lee street, in Egan, said yesterday as she told of a letter from her son, Bill Busby, saying he was safe after the sinking of the cruiser Atlanta.

"I got a letter just in time," she said. "Got it Monday and the Navy announced the sinking Monday night. I really would have been worried if I hadn't got that letter.

"You know he's our only child. Maybe you know how I feel about him.

"He wrote me a letter asking for fish hooks, lines and sinkers and he mentioned that the watch I gave him one Christmas had an accident."

Bill has been with the Atlanta since it put to sea. Mrs. Busby said she didn't know his rating or anything. "You know that little rascal—he's 20—just won't tell you anything. Other boys tell their mothers a few things, but when the Navy says 'secret' to him he thinks it means everything," Mrs. Busby laughed.

She paused long enough to have a picture made reading one of Bill's letters. She just couldn't help crying a bit then.

"I've got to get back to work, though," she explained. "I work at a cotton mill that is doing 92 per cent war work and Mr. Busby works at one doing 100 per cent war work.

"We sure are proud of Bill, though," she said as she started to leave. "You know if every one had prayed as much as I did for the Atlanta I don't believe it would have gone down.

"Why, I've been holding it up for weeks. I kept hearing rumors it had sunk, you see, and I told people off for saying it."

Then adjusting the shawl around her head, Mrs. Busby was off to do her share in this war.

SO HAPPY—Mrs. James E. Busby, of Egan, was so happy she was crying and laughing, too, when she learned her son was saved from the Atlanta.

SURVIVES BATTLE—Bill Busby, of Egan, was one of the Atlantans saved when the cruiser Atlanta sank. He wrote recently asking for fishing tackle.

Admiral Scott Lost on Atlanta

PEARL HARBOR, T. H., Jan. 12. (AP)—Rear Admiral Norman Scott, formerly of Kirkwood, Mo., lost his life when the cruiser Atlanta was sunk during the battle of Guadacanal last November, it was disclosed today.

His death had been previously reported, but not the circumstances nor time. Announcement by the Navy Department in Washington yesterday of the loss of the Atlanta permitted the disclosure that the admiral had gone down with the Atlanta in the naval engagement of November 13 to 15, 1942, in the Solomons Islands area.

Prince of Old Austria Becomes U. S. Private

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Prince Gaetan de Bourbon Parme, of Austria, today became a private in the United States Army.

The 37-year-old brother of former Princess Zita and uncle of Archduke Otto was inducted in ceremonies in the orchid room of Delmonico's, now used by the draft board.

The prince, father of an 11-year-old daughter, Diane, now in France, fought with Franco in the Spanish civil war of 1936. He said he was wounded six times.

He has been in the United States 14 months.

Hornet Made Japanese Pay Heavy Toll

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The aircraft carrier Hornet "made the Japanese pay dearly for her sinking;" the Navy said today in releasing the full, heroic account of the ship's exploits in the battles of Midway and Santa Cruz and during raiding missions in the south Pacific.

Identification of the ship was made known yesterday by the Navy following up its announcement last November that an aircraft carrier, then unidentified, had been so severely damaged in the Santa Cruz engagement that she had to be sunk later by other American ships.

Today's story revealed that of the Hornet's 2,900 men all but 129 were rescued by other vessels in her task force after the crew abandoned ship.

Takes Heavy Toll.

Then two destroyers were ordered to sink her with torpedoes and shells. The sinking finally was effected about dusk on October 26, 10 hours after Japanese planes had mortally damaged the vessel.

A summary of the accomplishments of the Hornet's aerial squadrons—scouting eight, bombing eight, torpedo eight and fighting eight—showed they had damaged and in some instances sunk or probably sunk at least 18 Japanese ships, including aircraft carriers and battleships.

In addition, they had raided Japanese bases in the Solomon Islands and destroyed numerous stores, small craft and munitions at such places as the Buin-Faisi area of Bougainville Island and the Rekata Bay area of Santa Isabel Island.

Heroic Finish.

One of the aircraft carriers they pounded terrifically was described by the Navy as being of the Zuikaku class, dimensions of which are not known here, but which was described by the American pilots as larger than either the U. S. S. Lexington or the U. S. S. Saratoga, largest in the American Navy.

The end of the Hornet was filled with many thrilling and heroic incidents for individual members of her crew. At the height of the attack against her in the Santa Cruz battle, a 1,000-pound bomb pierced the deck and entered the room next to the ordnance room but failed to explode. The ordnance chief, working in the dark, made the bomb harmless.

At another stage of the battle, after enemy explosives had set raging fires in the ship, the fire-fighting apparatus was destroyed and a bucket brigade took over and successfully accomplished the job of extinguishing the blaze.

Downs 156 Japs.

The text of the Navy's account of the Hornet's career:

"The U. S. S. Hornet, identified by the Navy Department as the aircraft carrier lost October 26 in the battle of the Santa Cruz Islands, wrote her valedictory in blazing gunfire. On the day she perished, the Navy task force of which the Hornet was a part, shot down 156 Japanese warplanes.

"The Hornet's final attainment, nevertheless, pales when placed alongside the destruction she logged in the five months preceding her sinking.

"Even more devastating to the enemy were the blows the Hornet struck at warships and auxiliaries. Her squadrons—scouting eight, bombing eight, torpedo eight and fighting eight—at Midway and Santa Cruz produced the following minimum results:

"At least one torpedo hit on a carrier.

Bomb Carrier.

"Two 1,000-pound and one 500-pound bomb hits and two 1,000-pound near-misses on battleships.

"Six 1,000-pound bomb hits on another cruiser.

"Two 500-pound bomb hits on a cruiser.

"One 1,000 and one 500-pound bomb hits on destroyers.

"One destroyer strafed by fighters.

"Seven 1,000-pound bomb hits on a carrier, larger than any American carrier, which was last seen blazing from stem to stern, and crosswind in the water.

"Four 10,000-ton transports with a capacity of approximately 5,000 men each, sunk.

"That is the damage list for Midway and Santa Cruz. At Santa Cruz, Grumman Avender torpedo planes and Douglas Dauntless dive bombers from another U. S. carrier helped avenge the Hornet's sinking by laying two 500-pound bombs on a carrier of the Shokaku class, two 1,000-pound bomb hits on a battleship, and a torpedo hit on a cruiser. They also strafed a cruiser and shot down 23 Jap planes.

Raids Bases.

"Between the Midway and Santa Cruz battles, the Hornet launched an attack on the Buin-Faisi area, scoring hits on a tanker, a light cruiser and two cargo ships, shot down several planes and bombed the Cahili airfield. They also made another raid at Rekata Bay, where two beached transports were hit and burned, landing barges and supplies were fired, fuel dumps and antiaircraft installations destroyed, and 12 seaplanes shot down.

"Commanded at the climax of her career by Rear Admiral Charles P. Mason, U. S. N., of Pensacola, Fla., the Hornet thus made the Japanese pay dearly for her sinking. And in the final analysis, the Japs themselves could not sink her. She survived attack after attack. One raging fire was extinguished by bucket brigades after the fire-fighting apparatus was destroyed. The Hornet was taken in tow and began to leave the battle area. Subsequent attacks damaged her badly.

Not Done Fighting.

"Finally, after 10 hours under attack, the order was given to torpedo the Hornet to preclude any possibility of her falling into enemy hands. But the Hornet was not done fighting. Two destroyers were ordered to sink her, and this they did with torpedoes and shells. As dusk crept over the south Pacific, the Hornet slid beneath the surface. Other surface vessels had rescued all but 129 of her complement of 2,900 men.

"The Hornet had had a narrow brush with disaster about two months earlier, on September 6. The torpedo, launched from an enemy submarine, was speeding toward her hull when the pilot of an Avenger torpedo bomber managed to hit near the torpedo with a depth charge. The deadly missile broached and changed course, passing safely beyond the carrier.

"The enemy force faced on October 26 was one of the greatest warship concentrations in history. There were, in one group, two cruisers, seven destroyers and two carriers; in another group, two battleships, one heavy cruiser, one light cruiser, seven destroyers and one or two carriers.

Scouting Squad.

"The Hornet's scouting squadron eight, speeding in dauntless dive bombers to attack the Jap carriers, contacted the ships of both forces. Led by Lieutenant Commander William J. Widhelm, USN, of Humphrey, Neb., the squadron roared past three vessels. Their orders were: 'Get the carriers.'

Within sighting distance of the first enemy flat-top, and after the squadron had been under constant, fierce attack by Zeros for half an hour over a distance of 75 miles, Widhelm himself was shot down. His squadron—the rear gunners of which were credited with 15 Zeros—immediately closed up and went in after the carrier, a ship of the Zuikaku class, described by pilots as larger than either the U. S. S. Lexington or U. S. S. Saratoga, largest in the U. S. Navy's history.

"From a rubber lifeboat, Widhelm and his rear gunner, Aviation Radioman George D. Stokely, of Newport, Tenn., watched their mates lay seven 1,000-pound bombs on the deck of the carrier, which broke into roaring flames for her entire length and went virtually dead in the water.

"Bombing Fools."

"The remarkable dive bombing feat of Widhelm's 'bombing fools'—as they had become known to the fleet—was accomplished by 11 of the Douglas dive bombers which took off from the Hornet's flight deck. One in addition to Widhelm's had been shot down and two others, damaged, were forced to take refuge in the clouds. The remaining 11 dropped the seven 1,000-pound bombs that probably spelled the doom of the Jap carrier.

"Widhelm and Stokely were rescued by a Consolidated Catalina patrol bomber three days later, and rejoined their mates and the other Hornet squadrons to continue fighting from land bases. Scouting Squadron 8 claimed a total of approximately 40 Jap planes shot down during their operations from the Hornet, mostly by their rear gunners. Lieutenant Commander Widhelm shot down one with his six guns.

"The saga of the Hornet began in late May, 1942, when, returning to Pearl Harbor after an extended cruise in enemy waters without contacting the Japanese, she was ordered immediately to carry a squadron to the vicinity of Midway in company with a task force.

Plays Major Role.

"In the Midway battle, these squadrons played a major role in defeating the Japanese fleet and rolling back the greatest threat of invasion of continental America in the war. From June 4 to 6, the hard-hitting Hornet air group made five separate attacks and scored more than 14 direct hits and two near misses on Japanese warships, heavily strafed a destroyer with 50-caliber machine-gun fire, and shot down three Zeros and two divebombers. In addition, the Hornet acted as a foster home for the famous Fighting Squadron 3, credited with the destruction of 25 enemy airplanes and probably 15 more, after this squadron's carrier, the Yorktown, had been put out of action. The Hornet at that time was under the command of Captain (now rear admiral) Mark A. Mitscher.

"The carrier left Pearl Harbor about June 1 to help intercept the enemy force off Midway. Her airplanes took off from shore and joined her at sea. Widhelm was unable to get his airplane started, and was flown out to the ship in the rear seat of a torpedo bomber. He was credited in the ensuing action with two direct hits with 1,000-pound bombs on a Japanese battleship. He received the Navy cross for this action.

First Action.

"The Hornet's air group first roared into action at 9 o'clock in the morning of June 4. In search of a Japanese force of four aircraft carriers, reported to be more than 150 miles away, Torpedo Squadron 8, accompanied by fighters and dive-bombers, took off on what was to prove one of the most heroic episodes of the war. Torpeod Squadron 8 pressed straight on to the target in spite of the fact that it became separated from its escorting fighters. Several miles before it reached the group of enemy carriers, it was attacked by an overwhelming force of Japanese Zeroes. In spite of the hopeless odds against it, the squadron never wavered, but held course straight for the carriers. First one member, then another, then others in quick succession fell before the Jap attack. How many torpedo hits they scored before they finally were shot down will never be known, for only Ensign G. H. Gay, USNR, returned from this squadron's heroic action. Gay himself scored a hit and it is probable that several of his squadron mates did also. All pilots from this squadron were later awarded the Navy Cross and their gunners were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. With the exception of Ensign Gay's, all awards were posthumous.

Second Attack.

"Some of the scout bombers which had become separated from the torpedo bombers were able to return to the carrier; the others, with the accompanying fighters, returned to Midway to refuel.

"A number of the Hornet's Grumman Wildcats had remained behind to furnish a protective combat air patrol over our own carriers. These fighters helped to intercept the Japanese attack on the near-by Yorktown, and in this action shot down three Zeroes and two Japanese dive-bombers.

"The second attack by the Hornet air group was launched at approximately 6 o'clock the same afternoon. A large force of Dauntless dive-bombers was launched and scored three direct hits on a battleship and two on a heavy cruiser.

"The third attack came the next day, when another roup of Dauntless planes was launched to search for the remaining Japanese carriers. This group was not able to locate the carriers, so attacked the nearest available target, a light cruiser, and returned to the Hornet.

Heavy Personnel Loss.

"The fourth attack was launched on the morning of June 6 by a large force of Dauntless dive bombers, escorted by Wildcats. This force attacked an enemy group consisting of a battleship, a heavy cruiser and three destroyers. Two 1000-pound bombs and one 500-pound bomb hits were scored on the battleship and two 1000-pound bombs fell within 50 feet of the battleship. Two other 1000-pound bomb hits were scored on the heavy cruiser and one 500-pound bomb struck the stern of one of the destroyers. Four of the Wildcats teamed up to strafe another destroyer with their .50-caliber machine guns. This attack caused heavy personnel losses on the bridge and deck of the destroyer.

"The fifth Hornet attack was launched that afternoon by Dauntless dive bombers. Their target was a Jap force of two cruisers and two destroyers more than 100 miles distant. One of the cruisers was left completely gutted by fire, with its personnel abandoning ship."

Priorities on Wire Confuses Farmers

Placing of barbed wire, wire fence and miscellaneous farm equipment and machinery on the priorities list has left farmers in the Atlanta area confused over how to obtain needed equipment, Noon B. Hudson Jr., district manager of WPB's priorities division, said yesterday.

He reported that more than 100 persons have appealed to their rationing boards or to the WPB priorities division to get wire fencing in the past few days. Neither agency can help, he declared.

Proper procedure is to work through county agents, who can obtain such needed farm equipment for them, Hudson said.

Pocket radio sets, six inches high, two inches thick and having tubes the size of peanuts, are to be made in England after the war.

Atlantan Tells Gripping Story Of Hornet's Santa Cruz Battle

By JIM LITTLE.

If there's any such person as a war fan, Mrs. W. H. Lloyd, of 699 Durant place, N. E., is one of them.

"They were out to get the Hornet and they got her, but they paid for her, all right," said Mrs. Lloyd, whose son, William, lived aboard the proud carrier throughout her short life.

Just as if she had been explaining Texas' upsetting Tech in the Cotton Bowl, Mrs. Lloyd yesterday recalled her son's description of the Santa Cruz battle when he was home on Christmas leave.

Tells of Attack.

Young Lloyd, an electrician's mate, second class, who joined up with the Georgia Tech battalion, spent 284 out of 365 days at sea aboard the Hornet and now has gone back to sea.

"And he asked for it, too," she said. "I tried to get him to put in for shore duty, but he said no, he wanted another flat-top."

Bill had told her, she said, how some 45 of 60 planes attacking the carrier were shot down by the ship's guns. Three Japs made suicide dives on the flight deck.

"The story Bill told of that ship's death was one I'll never forget," said Mrs. Lloyd. "The guns were firing away until the last minute, even after she had listed heavily. And the captain was the last man to slide down the ropes."

Young Lloyd, a war baby of 1918, whose father looked into the Mexican Border trouble and just missed getting overseas in the last war, swam out from the ship when it was abandoned and was in the water for a long time before a destroyer picked him up.

"Sharks Afraid, Too."

"He swam away from the crowds because he was afraid the Japs would try to bomb any concentration of men in the water," his mother said.

"The sharks must have been afraid, too, because they stayed away from that side of the ship. But some of them were seen on the other side."

Before joining the Navy, Bill worked for the legal department of Sears-Roebuck, continuing work at Georgia Tech evening school after graduation from Tech High.

"He's our only son, and to say we are proud of him would be an understatement," said Mrs. Lloyd.

Bill's father, member of Atlanta's own 116th Field Artillery during World War I, couldn't be reached for his comments.

"He's busy on a war construction job," his wife explained.

Corn Price Ceiling Fixed To Protect Livestock Raisers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The government called a halt today to sharply advancing corn prices in a move designed to maintain a "profit margin" between livestock and feed prices and thereby encourage farmers to produce maximum quantities of meats, milk, poultry and eggs for war food needs.

The Office of Price Administration, acting with the approval of Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and at the direction of Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, placed a ceiling on corn prices on all exchanges and in every cash and local market over the country, generally at levels at which sales were made yesterday. It was the first time price ceilings have been applied to a major farm commodity.

The ceilings become effective tomorrow. They were described as temporary ceilings to be followed within 60 days by permanent ceilings which will not permit any increase in the general level of corn prices.

Corn futures slumped on the Chicago Board of Trade after the OPA order became known, and other grains declined as well. At the close, declines in corn ranged from 2 3-8 to 2 5-8 cents, with May 97 1-8-97, July 97 1-2-3-8, September 98-97 7-8. Yesterday's prices, highest reached in five years, were: $1.00 for May, $1.00 3-8 for July and $1.00 7-8 for September.

Agriculture Department economists said the OPA order would have the effect of placing ceilings on corn at about 93 per cent of the parity price. The department itself had sough to stabilize corn at about 85 per cent of parity by selling government-owned stocks at that level. However, those stocks have become depleted through sales to farmers.

'Peanut Week' To Celebrate Double Victory

Ten-Day Observance Scheduled To Start January 21.

One hundred thousand southern peanut growers will celebrate a "double victory" with the 10-day observance of National Peanut Week beginning January 21, W. B. Jester said yesterday.

"Victory number one," Jester, executive secretary-treasurer of the National Peanut Council, asserted, "is the record-breaking 2,504,000,000 pounds of peanuts southern farmers produced in 1942 to aid the nation's war efforts."

"Victory number two is the fact that Americans now are beginning to realize that the peanut, once largely associated with baseball games and circuses, is one of the most nutritious foods produced by the nation's farmers."

Peanut Vital in War.

Jester declared that the once-lowly peanut assumed a vital role in America's war economy when the Japanese invasion of the east cut off much of the nation's normal supplies of vegetable fats and oil. Until the war, a great part—1,700,000,000 pounds—of the United States' fats and oils were imported.

"After Pearl Harbor, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard called on the south's farmers to plant 5,000,000 acres of peanuts in 1942," he explained. "A total of 3,690,000 acres of peanuts actually was harvested, nearly double the 1941 production."

"Secretary Wickard has asked that 5,500,000,000 acres be planted in 1943," he said. "The peanut council has made the achievement of this acreage one of its major goals and I am sure that the south's peanut growers will come through this year just as they did in 1942."

Plenty to Eat.

Jester asserted that there would be plenty of peanuts for Americans to eat, even though the increased acreage will be used entirely for the production of peanut oil, essential both for food purposes and for helping produce munitions. At least 1,610,000 acres, the same as 1942, will be allotted to production of peanuts for edible consumption this year, he said.

"National Peanut Week will be celebrated throughout the country," the council official declared. "Thousands of housewives are expected to enter a peanut recipe contest we are putting on in connection with Peanut Week. Thousands of retail stores already have signified their intentions of featuring peanuts and peanut products during the week. Hotels, railroad dining cars and restaurants will feature peanut dishes on their menus."

Farmers Asked To Fill Out 'Work Sheets'

More Than 400 Communities Hold 'M-Day' Rallies in State.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 12.—(AP)—Georgia farmers were asked to provide county war boards with their individual farming plans today as part of the nationwide farm mobilization day program.

For the next six weeks farmers will be asked to fill out work sheets designed to show labor requirements, and farm plan sheets to show production plans for war essential crops. The sheets will list each farmer's plans for production or soil building practices during the year.

The information will form the basis in part for determining farmers' needs and recommendations by county war boards with respect to machinery rationing, labor supply and selective service deferments.

County production goals were outlined at meetings called in more than 400 communities. Most of the meetings were held in the afternoon during a special all-network broadcast on which President Roosevelt and Secretary of Agriculture Wickard appealed for increased food production to meet war demands.

In calling the Georgia meetings, T. R. Breedlove, chairman of the state USPA War Board, said members of county war boards would explain the setting up of individual farm goals and a "bonus" plan of payments for meeting individual goals. This plan provides benefit payments to farmers reaching 90 per cent of their individual goals. Payments will be reduced in proportion to farmers' failure to reach that figure.

Farm labor problems, machinery and equipment rationing, feed seed and fertilizer supplies, price supports and other problems also were taken up at the meetings.

CO-OP EGG GROUP.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 12.—A co-operative egg marketing association in Johnson county, organized by members of home demonstration clubs, now has 95 members caring for 15,000 chickens, who reported the sale of $28,000 worth of eggs this year, the Extension Service states.

The Ration Counter...

Your questions about all phases of the various rationing programs will be answered authoritatively by The Ration Counter. Telephone your questions to Walnut 3876 between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. Mail inquiries must be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. They should be addressed to The Ration Counter, care The Constitution, Atlanta.

War time multiplies personal problems, and in the effort to effect an equitable distribution of the things which are left for civilian consumption, sometimes a hardship is worked on individuals.

It is unfortunate that Americans, who even in war time, have more food, clothes and comforts than any nation on earth, have by their own unthinking actions made it necessary for stores to limit the quantity of food an individual may purchase. It is the hoarders—there are not many of them, but they are an active group—who are responsible for the problem which faces this College Park woman, Mary Bowier. She writes: "My sole support lies in my little cafe through which I have made my living since my husband's death. I have an invalid sister to support.

"Please help me in some way so I will be able to get the small quantity of meats and other supplies from the stores which I need in my business to enable me to make an honest living."

She has a real problem, for the stores have found it necessary to limit the amount of purchases on a great many articles to prevent runs. If this was a large cafe, she, of course, could deal directly with a wholesaler and procure the necessary amount of supplies.

The Ration Counter's suggestion, after talking to OPA officials, is that she make a habit of trading at the same store and that she talk to the store manager and put her problem to him. Universally the local grocery stores have expressed a willingness to cooperate in every way with the public in providing necessary food and other items.

Bride, Groom and Minister Allowed To Drive to Wedding

A number of questions regarding use of automobiles for weddings have brought this ruling from OPA. The bride and groom, the minister and the attendants may go to and from the church in cars. Guests at the wedding must use public transportation facilities.

If Mrs. Housewife has been laboring under the idea that soon she will be required to spend hours filling out a complicated form and standing in line to get War Ration Book Two, she can relax her worries and rest assured that little time will be spent in obtaining Number Two Book. In fact, the approximate length of time she will spend in procuring Ration Book Two, will be 10 minutes, according to a demonstration registration staged here this week by the regional OPA staff.

Using dummy forms and ration books, the OPA staff with cooperation of civilian volunteers, completed registration of 32 persons in 30 minutes in the demonstration given before OPA officials from eight southeastern states. The 10 minutes required for registration under the new speedy setup included the time consumed in filling out a form declaring quantity of canned goods in stock.

Number Two Registration Date Will Be Announced Later

Date for registration for Number Two Book will be announced later, but persons must have Number One Book on hand when registering for the Number Two Book. January 15 is deadline for getting the One Book, if you do not already have it.

Automobile owners and drivers in this area are showing their patriotism in co-operating in the effort to eliminate non-essential driving. Many drivers continue to be confused as to where to draw the line between essential and non-essential driving.

Mrs. Banks Oxford, 520 West Cambridge avenue, College Park, had the question to arise in her church circle as to whether it would be illegal to use the car to drive to a circle meeting held in the church building.

As has been stated before, public transportation must be used to attend auxiliary church circle meetings, missionary societies and fraternal or social gatherings, regardless of where the meeting is held.

Minister May Drive Automobile To Visit Sick of Congregation

The Reverend Thomas Whitfield, pastor of White Oak Hills Baptist church, wondered if visiting the sick of his congregation would be unpatriotic or illegal driving. Since a large number of Reverend Whitfield's congregation live in areas not served by public transportation, using his car to visit the sick would be permissible under OPA regulations. However, members who can be reached by public transportation, should be visited in that manner in order to save as much gasoline as possible.

This is not a question regarding rationing, but since it ties in directly with the war effort, and since the Ration Counter believes that it probably is a question in the minds of many patriotic Americans, it is being answered here.

The question was raised by Mrs. William P. Hill, of 499 West Peachtree, who since the concentrated scrap drive, has been able to find almost 400 pounds more of metal which she wants to donate to the war effort.

Mrs. Hill has become scrap-conscious, and has discovered a source of this vital material which the average citizen would never notice. She has removed the metal fronts to the fireplaces, and also the electric charging plant from an old automobile. And she wants to send these new salvaged articles to take their place alongside the truckload of metal which she turned in a few months ago.

Junk Dealers Equipped To Handle All Scrap for War Effort

The War Production Board pointed out, in answering the question that the government has no facilities for separating, grading and processing scrap so that it may go back into the war effort. All scrap must pass through the hands of the scrap dealers, who, alone are equipped to do this sorting job. The scrap could be taken to one of the filling stations which still maintain its salvage pile and the station will send it on to the scrap man, or you may sell the scrap directly to the dealer. If you desire to make a contribution to the war effort, L. E. Walters, regional head of the WLB conservation division, suggests that the proceeds from the sale of your scrap be donated to one of the war charities or be used to purchase bonds or stamps.

Millions of Eggs and Broilers Are Produced by FSA Groups

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 12. (AP)—Eggs and broilers by the millions are being produced by Farm Security Administration aided families in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida, R. L. Vansant, assistant regional director in charge of rural rehabilitation said today.

Production this year, as a part of the Food for Freedom program, has been greatly expanded, he said. Six to nine million chickens from broods averaging 100 to 150 at a time, will be raised by some 60,000 FSA families. In addition, large scale production projects by picked families experienced in poultry production will raise another seven million broilers.

Approximately 100 new brooder houses, each capable of growing out 1,000 broilers in a 10-week period have been constructed in 10 north Georgia counties. About half of the new houses are now in use, and the others will be placed in operation as soon as the chicks arrive.

Hall county, Georgia, for instance, had 50 brooder houses on FSA farms last year, and 30 new houses are completed. This will give Hall county a production of 80,000 broilers during each ten-week period. Forsyth county, Georgia, has 200 houses with a production capacity of 200,000 broilers every ten weeks.

In central Georgia, 383 families are building 1,000-chicken capacity brooder houses. The houses will be placed in operation within a few days. The plans of these families call for three batches during the year, which means that another million broilers will be made ready for the market.

New Treatment For Face Injury Is Described

Boston Specialist in Macon, Tells of New Methods.

MACON, Ga., Jan. 12.—(AP)—Dr. Kurt H. Thoma, of Boston, described today the successful teaming of a new drug, pencillin, with the sulfa-compounds in the treatment of victims of the recent Cocoanut Grove fire at Boston in which several hundred persons were killed.

He said the drug was administered to 39 who were badly burned.

"Sulfadiazine was given intravenously for the first six days," said Dr. Thoma in an interview. "And then the patients who still had temperature of 101 degrees or above were given pencillin intramuscularly, with successful effect.

"Pencillin," he said, "is an antiseptic which affects more types of bacteria than the sulfa drugs."

Dr. Thoma, head of the department of oral and plastic surgery in the Harvard University school of dental medicine and a nationally known authority on facial injuries, came here for a dental society meeting to which dentists at Army posts in Georgia were invited.

"Improvements in the treatment of jaw fractures and other face injuries have been developed since the beginning of World War II," he declared, which enable wounded or injured men to return to duty within a short time.

"Using a skeletal splint, he can start chewing food with the jaw at once, go back to work the next day and return to actual combat duty in a remarkably short time," he said.

He described the Roger Anderson splint method especially which he said "does away with the cumbersome plaster casts, headgears and tying the teeth together. In addition," he said, "the new splint eliminates the danger of choking to death in case of seasickness when the wounded or injured is transported by sea."

He demonstrated the splint, made of metal, which is applied from the outside by bolts screwed or driven into the bone through the skin. A man with a fractured leg, he said, "can walk immediately when the new splint is applied."

ATLANTA, GA., JANUARY 13, 1943.

"Just an Ordinary Fellow"

"I am just an ordinary fellow who wants to do a good job for Georgia."

Those words were spoken by Georgia's new governor, Ellis Arnall, in his inaugural address delivered yesterday. In those words may be found strong basis for confidence that a new and happier day is dawning for Georgia.

The strength of free peoples always lies in the "ordinary fellows who want to do a good job." The viciousness of totalitarianism, of dictatorships, springs from their belief in miracle-working abilities of some self-anointed leader into whose hands they deliver the fate of their state.

Georgia, for the past two years, has suffered under the maladministration of a governor who conceived himself to be a superior being, gifted with some strange genius in administrative and financial matters. Witness the ill-famed House Bill Number 1, enacted by a complacent legislature at his behest, which placed in his hands such dangerous control over all state affairs.

In Georgia's young, new governor, Ellis Arnall, the people have an executive who assumes no false infallibility. He is, instead, an honest, sincere Georgian, anxious only to serve his state to the best of his ability, determined only to free the state from the burden of politicians who seek special privilege, of public officials who consider their jobs as opportunities for personal gain rather than as mandates for public service.

The new administration, Governor Arnall pledged in his inaugural address, will be the people's administration. It will not be controlled by special groups. It will make the people the court of last resort in event such appeal becomes necessary. "If the professional politicians force us into the corner," said Governor Arnall, "we will strike back by stating our case clearly before the bar of public opinion and with the help of the people we will dissipate any obstruction the politicians may attempt to place in our path."

Governor Arnall set forth some features of the program he hopes to see realized during his administration.

He pledges to veto any bill designed to increase taxes.

He calls for the complete removal of the Board of Regents of the University System from political influence, which will mean, also, restoration of the various units of the system to full accredited standing.

He also recommends reorganization of the State Board of Education with a constitutional board created.

An end to the scandalous pardon and parole racket is another goal. He wants the legislature to take the responsibility of clemency away from the governor and place it in the hands of a non-political board.

He asks repeal of the law that authorizes the governor to remove the comptroller-general and the state treasurer from office; that the state auditor be elected by the legislature and that the making of appropriations be restored to the legislature instead of being a power of the governor.

One of the striking features of the address is the recommendation that a statute be enacted placing a limit on campaign expenses for governorship aspirants in both primary and general elections. If this is not done, he says, the day is near when only rich men may aspire to the office.

He urges a lowering of the voting age to 18, on the argument that if youths of this age are old enough to fight for their country, they are old enough to have a say in the direction of its affairs.

These were among the high lights of many sane and intelligent recommendations for needed reforms in state affairs. Of course, to achieve them, he must have the co-operation of the legislature. That such co-operation will be forthcoming is already evident. The legislature realizes that the election of Arnall constitutes a mandate from the people, and it will seek to follow, as closely as possible, that mandate.

It was a great inaugural address, a message of new hope to the people of a state which has for too long suffered under the maladministration of demagogues or self-seeking politicians.

Said Governor Arnall:

"We align the new administration with the cause of intelligence, honesty, fair-play, decency and democracy. We will work against demogoguery, ignorance, hatred, prejudice and wrong doing."

If he sticks to that program, he cannot but succeed in his desire, as "just an ordinary fellow" to "do a good job for Georgia."

How much simpler was the French problem in other days, when the searchers for a new man-of-the-hour came up with Aristide Briand, for the twenty-ninth time.

—BONDS WILL BUILD ANOTHER U. S. S. ATLANTA!—

U. S. S. Atlanta

If ships must die, there can be no prouder death than that of the U. S. S. Atlanta. The sadness of the city at the loss of the cruiser is tempered by the gallant manner in which she went down, fighting. The city can ask no more of the ships and men who bear the name and honor of Atlanta to the far battlefields of the war.

Let there be no measure of regret. Built to fight, the U. S. S. Atlanta carried out her destiny and her name will forever be honored where men talk of the fleet and the ships of the Navy list. Rather, now, let all Atlantans look to the future, determined that another ship and other men will bear the same name to take the war to the foe.

Reborn from the ashes of war, Atlanta knows that when cities or ships are lost in the holocaust they live anew in the hearts of their country. As it was with the city of Atlanta, so it must be with the U. S. S. Atlanta, reborn to fight again and again for the tenets of free men and the glory of the flag.

Every account available of the sinking of the Atlanta tells a story of heroism and of the reluctant death of the slim grey destroyer-killer that lived but a little more than a year from the day when she slid down the ways at Kearny, N. J., a little less than a year from the December day when her commission pennant was raised to the masthead and the boatswain's pipes sounded on her decks for the first time as the watches were set.

Her end reminds of the lines from Gene Fowler's famous "Jervis Bay," and, to paraphrase, the U. S. S. Atlanta went "down as no mere casualty of storm to rust out fathoms deep in common grave with sisters unremembered by the years."

Atlanta may give heartfelt praise to the officers and men of the cruiser; to the families of those who fought and died, condolence; to the ship, farewell and the pledge that another Atlanta will be built to fight until the day when the liberty parties go ashore at Tokyo.

A Simple Story

Yes, it was just a simple story about the First Lady of this democracy and a private in its Army—not news of great importance, really. And then it went on to tell, that story out of Washington, how a military policeman, a stranger in the capital, got to talking with Mrs. Roosevelt at Union Station, and how they walked together from the station to the White House, and how the First Lady invited him to dinner there, and how they ate together, with some others, and how, finally, the soldier went back to the station and caught his train.

Here, certainly, was American democracy at its best. Could such an incident happen anywhere else on earth? Can it be pictured happening in a dictatorship? In lands where the philosophy is to "rise to power on the backs of the common people?" Of course, it couldn't happen there!

Just as that simple story warmed the hearts of millions of Americans, it must have warmed the shades of Washington and Jefferson and Jackson and the hosts of others whose going beyond has made the history of this nation, and whose lives helped to make this democracy live.

Georgia Editors Say:

SHOULD SATISFY THE COMPLAINERS

(From the Athens Banner-Herald.)

News that the War Department has announced, officially, that the soldiers get coffee with only one meal a day should, in a measure, be comforting to those citizens who have been complaining over the rationing order of coffee, which has, of course, reduced the number of cups per person in civilian life. However, if our soldiers are being rationed to that extent, we feel that our people should be satisfied to make the best of whatever hardships may be imposed by the rationing order.

These men are undergoing all kinds of hardships and the best of foods should be furnished them. It is not so much the question of our sacrifices, but it is a case of our armed forces having, in abundance, not only coffee, but everything else they need.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WHO'S DECADENT NOW? WASHINGTON, Jan. 12—Master psychologist that he is, President Roosevelt probably drafted his recent message to congress with an eye to making it the leading Allied propaganda document of the war. From this standpoint it is difficult to see how it could have been improved upon.

Hitler and Tojo are now put to the necessity of explaining to their dupes how the "decadent, inefficient democracy" of America can outproduce them in the vital weapons of war so quickly after we were drawn into the conflict.

For years they have been telling their people, the Germans and the Japanese, that the United States was no longer a nation to be feared. What greatness we had achieved, they said, was long ago dissipated by too close living in the lap of luxury, gained from our accumulation of riches.

In Japan the Tokyo warlords constantly sold their people the idea that we Americans had become a decadent race, grown soft and flabby from riding in automobiles and incapable of the stamina required to endure severe hardships. We would be pushovers in any war, the people were told.

Hitler, whether he believed it or not, pretended to share the viewpoint of the Japanese. His domestic propaganda theme since we entered the war has been designed to convince the German people that the United States offered no threat to the victory which he had often promised his followers. His own estimate of us must have been of a very low order.

ONLY EXPLANATION In no other way is it possible to explain how he could have deliberately provoked a war with us. Without waiting for us to take the initiative, which we were not yet prepared to do, he forced the issue by joining with the Japs in a declaration of war against us within 48 hours after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Nothing but a contemptuous disregard for the fighting quality of American men and the productive capacity of our industrial machine could have forced upon him such a decision as that.

Hitler and Tojo, therefore, must have sold themselves also on the idea of American decadence. Perhaps they repeated the lie often enough to convince themselves. We do know that this is the sort of conception they sought to paint of us among their own people.

NOW DISILLUSIONED And now, 13 months to the day after Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt comes forward with the sad disillusionment. The factual report he gave on our war production, the number of planes and ships and guns we have built, was a devastating answer to the old Axis decadent line.

The President revealed that last year we produced 48,000 military planes—more than the total production of Germany, Italy and Japan combined. Also, that we have now reached a figure of more than 5,500 planes a month. He disclosed that we have made comparable achievements in tank production, in guns, ammunition and other implements of war.

Although we have been in the war for only 13 months, our arms production is already between three and four times as much as it was in most categories for the entire period of the last war. Here is a record that brought heartening news to the Allied world, and, by the same token, a note of profound discouragement to the Axis nations.

Most of the figures Mr. Roosevelt revealed constituted military secrets of the first order. In releasing them he evidently felt that the information would be far more damaging than useful to the Axis.

SPEECH BROADCAST The British must have felt the same way about it. Immediately after the message was delivered to congress, steps were taken in London to rebroadcast the President's words to the whole of Europe, with particular emphasis on the Axis nations. There is no likelihood of the Germans and the Italians not being informed. It is sure to throw the fear of God in their hearts.

Similar steps have been taken with the Japs. They will awaken to the realization that we are not as decadent as Tojo and his warlords sought to have them believe. The Jap fighting men have already made the discovery. We have been shooting down their planes at a ratio of everywhere from four to ten to one ever since we started rolling in the Pacific.

The Germans, too, are learning a thing or two. As the President revealed, our air operations in Africa thus far have knocked the Nazis down at a ratio of two to one. We are using unseasoned pilots against the best the German military machine has to offer.

As a document of sheer Allied propaganda, the President's message is unexcelled.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Great Day For Georgia.

It is always within the realm of possibility that any forecast of things to come will be proven false by events. Yet, if we did not look into the future with whatever wisdom we have been given, we could not plan, we could arrange our affairs for the conditions which are to eventuate.

Sometimes circumstances permit greater confidence in prediction than is normally ours.

And I think it is pretty safe to predict that yesterday, when Governor Ellis Arnall took the oath of office, we in Georgia witnessed the beginning of a four-year period which shall achieve many worthwhile things for the state.

It will be, as all know, a difficult period. The state's financial condition is worse than it has ever been. Obligations to be met during the four years may total, when all is revealed, $40,000,000. The state's revenue, owing to wartime conditions, is already down some $10,000,000 or more and will, undoubtedly, shrink still further. Yet, again because of the war-imposed heavy federal taxes, it would be unthinkable to attempt to increase state tax rates.

However, with such a governor as Arnall promises to be, with an unusually high-calibered legislature, we can feel reasonable confidence that somehow, the problems will be met, the state will be steered wisely through its difficulties and the end of the Arnall administration will see a Georgia restored to sanity in its governmental affairs, with its good name regained in the outside world and with a brighter and a finer way of life opening before its citizens.

This Man Arnall.

Personally, I had never met Ellis Arnall until after he had decided to make the race for the governorship. Even afterwards, I had only a few, too brief conversations with him. But what I saw of him, what I heard him say during those conversations, made me like him and repose my personal faith in him.

It so happened I was so nauseated with the antics of the then governor, Talmadge, I would have been willing to accept almost anyone in his place. But it was fine to discover that the man with brightest prospect of defeating him in the primary, seemed to be such fine gubernatorial timber.

I looked forward to the campaign, with the hope I could do something to help elect Arnall and, perhaps more eagerly, defeat Talmadge. That is, something more than the mere casting of my own vote, though that was a privilege and a pleasure.

Then, just as the real campaign was beginning, I had to go to a hospital and for nine weeks I was entirely out of the picture. I just got back into harness to deliver a few blows for the cause before the primary day rolled around. I hope those blows were, in some degree, effective.

Since the primary I have seen Ellis Arnall once, a brief greeting in this office. I am not going to add to his work by intruding on him in the early days of his administration. But, after the first rush is over, after things have somewhat quietened, I do hope I can see more of him. For I think he is the sort of fellow who, the more you know of him, the better you like him.

Now A Quotation.

I want, in closing this column, to quote a paragraph or two from Governor Arnall's inaugural address. With a word or two of comment. Said he:

"We will have an honest administration for the next four years.

"If any citizen of Georgia learns of graft, irregularities or corruption in the state government, I want to know about it. Here and now I emphatically state that I shall be the first to expose anyone connected with my administration, no matter how near or dear to me he may be, who profits, racketeers, or thrives on unjust gains or "deals" at the state's expense. Not only will he be exposed, but he will be swiftly punished.

"No one need employ lobbyists to get the ear of those with whom they would confer. No one need employ emissaries to see the governor. I will be available to the people, to the humblest and highest of this state alike, at my office in the state capitol."

As an old capitol reporter, I hereby testify that, if those promises come true, it will be just about the grandest reform this state has ever seen.

And one more paragraph from the Arnall speech:

"We will be glad to see our friends at the executive mansion when they come there socially, but I hope that our friends will realize that the mansion will be our home and not a business office. Certainly, the governor and his family deserve some degree of home life, small though that degree may be."

Again, Governor Arnall hit a most intelligent nail squarely on the head.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Sunday, January 13, 1918:

"Washington, January 12.—The coldest weather experienced in the United States since 1899 tonight extended from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic coast and from the lakes to the gulf."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Friday, January 13, 1893:

"Macon, Ga., January 12.—(Special)—Two well-known pieces of property were offered at public outcry to the highest bidder before the courthouse door this morning. They were the Macon Brewery and the Macon Telegraph."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Another Tradition NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—To ease the strain of the railroads, the baseball industry has decided to abandon spring training in the grand manner this year, and there goes another of those cherished institutions of the U. S. A. That the athletes can work themselves into condition in the north has never been doubted by the older generation of magnates and managers, including Cousin Egbert Barrow, the business manager of the Yankees, who took a Toronto club not south, but to a little resort even farther north, in 1902, and won a pennant. But the southern trip was a lovely experience and fine advertising and even the customers who remained in the north while the players eased into their toil had a sense that spring could not be long coming once the dispatches started running under such date lines at St. Petersburgh, Sarasota, Bradenton and Tampa.

Some of the magnates had a hard time keeping up with the Joneses in the matter of board and room and railroad tickets for their employees. Clark Griffith, of Washington, and big-hearted Charlie Ebbets, of Brooklyn, sometimes had to borrow money against the receipts of the coming season to send their people south, but once the tradition was set, even the poorest clubs in the most distressful seasons required themselves to conform, and the players and the ink-stained wretches of the Fourth Estate enjoyed themselves oblivious of the worries of the owners.

In recent years the living standards of the major league teams have been very high, but just after the first World War when the Florida custom was beginning some of the arrangements were catch-as-catch-can. The Brooklyn club's early abode in Florida, when the first of the booms was going, and the hotels were fewer, was an inn in Clearwater above a row of little stores which had only one bath and that one full of immature alligators and ill-tempered snapping turtles. Mr. Ebbets and Uncle Wilbert Robinson, the manager, had pleasant homes apart and the athletes were expected to use the showers at the ball yard and to take their meals at the greasy spoon on an allowance of about $3 a day.

Plastered Shortstop Always, in such cases there would be thrifty heroes of the sport page who would save a dollar or two and develop indigestion and be nigh onto collapse from malnutrition by the time they started home. Socially, the Brooklyn athletes were uncommonly frisky and the night I checked into their humble abode the first time there was a crash of glass followed by several pistol shots.

Mr. Abe Yeager, the Brooklyn sport editor, was dealing at the time and without looking up from his cards, remarked that our shortstop was plastered again and holding target practice. It seemed that our shortstop had a habit of throwing a gin bottle out of window and trying to shoot it on the wing.

One spring, John McGraw, who set the high standard of living and travel, took his Giants to Sarasota for the first time, and was indignant when the hotel management, which had a low and apprehensive opinion of ball players, shunted them into a rickety annex. Mr. McGraw threatened to take his ball club out of town, and W. O. McGeehan wrote so bitingly of the outrage that the Ku Klux Klan held a torchlight parade for him and a local newspaper ran an editorial addressed to him under the title, "Keep Your Damn Mouth Shut." The Ku Klux and the local editor lost the argument, but Sarasota got a lot of publicity which seems not to have hurt the town for it has flourished nicely in the years since, always with one or more clubs on hand in spring to augment the drawing power and publicity value of the winter quarters of the circus.

During Prohibition In prohibition days, Florida was a gentle place with an elastic conscience and a fine source of supply. It probably came by boat. Anyway, Florida always had plenty of good Cuban rum and other reliable goods and local chambers of commerce and such groups were always arranging social evenings with orations and good songs ringing more or less clear.

When the high minors took to Florida, there seemed hardly a town south of a line a little to the north of Palm Beach that didn't have at least one club in training and when the exodus began, they criss-crossed trails all over the south, playing their way home and picking up more or less revenue to recoup the expense. Jacksonville and the northern part of the state were thought to have a climate a little too raw.

Now they are going back to such places as Lakewood, N. J., French Lick and West Baden, Ind.; Excelsior Springs, Mo., and even to Yale and Tufts and that Hitler has set civilization back about 25 years.

It is a depressing prospect for the baseball writer. No golf, no swimming in the warm, blue water, no long lazy days on the trains, no fishing in the Gulf. And the worst of it is that the experiment will show that the men can train as well indoors with occasional sessions in the open on balmy days as ever they did down south, thus destroying a beautiful illusion and jeopardizing chances of a return to the old way when the war is over. Is that anybody's idea of a new and better world?

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

INAUGURATION On the way back from the capitol I stopped and looked up at the bronze figure of General John B. Gordon.

There seemed to be a quiet smile of relief on his face.

It was as if he were saying that for two years he had been uneasy, with his back turned toward the capitol. Now he seemed to be sitting firmly in his saddle, unafraid of what might go on behind him as he stood guard, looking toward the north.

I went around and looked up at the iron face of Tom Watson, that violent man in whom the volatile mixtures of greatness, genius, demagoguery, passion and prejudice constantly challenged one another.

His arm was upraised, as usual. But he seemed to look down at me from his pedestal and with some of the lines out of his face.

His back, too, has been turned toward the capitol and even Tom Watson would have been uneasy in that position in the past two years.

I may have been wrong, but it almost seemed as if he paused in the eternal speech he is making, and winked at me, confidently.

The sun was bright. The air was brisk, and the winds of January, their edges blunted by the Georgia air, blew softer than usual.

In the capitol I had seen a long line of Georgians; men, women and children were filing through the Governor's office to shake the hand of Ellis Arnall, Georgia's 71st Governor.

I liked the scene. I'd like to tell you about it.

There stood his mother, happy and proud. There was his brother, in the uniform of his country, on leave to see the inauguration. There were other relatives, people you would be happy to know and to be with; wholesome, good people. There were his wife, young and strikingly beautiful, and his handsome young son. It was an American picture. You would have been proud to see it.

You may know this about the new Governor—he honestly wants to do a good job. He honestly will try to do one.

CRITICAL TIME He takes office, as I assume every thoughtful Georgian must know, in a critical time.

The state is tremendously in debt.

The debt amounts to almost $36,000,000.

He will need the assistance of the state legislature which they, as patriotic members, will give. Ellis Arnall is to be Governor for four years. There is no place, or need for, any political opposition to his program.

The people elected him on that program as opposed to the one they wished to oust.

That much is clear.

He asks that education be given protection from any who, in the future, might again wish to seize on it and use it as a springboard for some infamous political plan.

The State University, chartered before any other in the nation, merits that much from the legislature, as do the common schools and the teachers of the state.

He asked for a retirement system for teachers.

Georgia ought to have one.

We ask our teachers to man the schools, which very truly are the citadels of democracy, and then underpay them and offer no plan for their old age.

Surely, even in time of war, Georgia can work out this for her most important workers.

He asked only for those things on which the people have made known their desire.

The people want better government. They want, too, decency and integrity. They are tired, I think, and hope, of cynical, corrupt government which brazenly admits its own pettiness.

THE GOVERNOR'S HOME I liked, too, and I imagine you will like, what he said about the executive mansion.

He said, first, that he would be available to every citizen who had business with the Governor.

He said then that he would see them in his office.

That is where the Governor of the state should see people who have business with the Governor.

He said next that he and his family would be glad to see their friends socially at their home.

But that no business would be transacted there.

This means an end to the "Palace Guard" type of gatherings which often made the mansion lobby look like some sort of zoo.

His degree of home life will be small at best, the demands on his office being what they are. But he merits as much as he can have.

HORATIO ALGER STORY This was not exactly a Horatio Alger story. But it has the elements of such a story.

He is a young man, being just 35.

He is well educated. He has served in all branches of the state government.

He defeated one of the most firmly established machines in the history of the state. He did it without any organization, but simply because the people were aroused in behalf of good government.

As he said, with complete candor, he is but the instrument they chose to express that desire.

Governor of a great state at 35—honest, able and eager to serve.

It was a good day. And we may hope for more ahead.

The Safeguard of Liberty Is a Statutory Limit on Every Official's Power

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Do you remember the Blue Eagle experiment? It was another effort to overcome economic law and human nature by act of congress.

A few big shots in each line of business were empowered to make laws to govern their competitors. Politicians in each state appointed people to enforce these "laws," and the system was financed by means of extortion—by forcing each little businessman to contribute so much under threat of prosecution.

A little tailor was arrested and prosecuted because he didn't charge enough for pressing a pair of pants.

Since the whole scheme violated the constitution—as the supreme court eventually agreed—it was lawless from the beginning and its extortions and coercions were criminal.

This Blue Eagle system was a typical example of government by commissions or bureaucrats.

Many well-intentioned and far-sighted men are now studying plans to determine the kind of world we shall have after the war. This is a good and necessary thing to do, for without such planning we shall lose the peace after winning the war, as we did the last time.

But these men are planning for the whole world—not for America. They are not making plans to preserve democracy here at home. And unless such plans are made, we may lose the very thing we are fighting to save.

At best we shall have a tough fight to save democracy, for all the world is choosing between Fascism and Communism.

Some American leaders say our government has become so complicated that its affairs cannot be managed except by the commission system. But the system means that congress empowers the President to appoint bureaucrats and give them power to make laws, and that is not democracy. It is government by whim, which can easily become government by tyranny, and thinking people are tired of it and afraid of it.

They will endure anything to win the war, but they must plan a post-war democracy now or they are likely to get something they like less.

A Book I Like—So I'm Passing It On to You

In a recent New Yorker magazine Clifton Fadiman—the "Information Please" interlocutor, paid high tribute to a new book. It interested me, so I hurried to borrow a copy and sat up late with it Monday night.

Yet it has no plot, no love interest, no sex appeal, no fine writing."

It is called "We Took to the Woods," and was written by Louise Dickinson Rich, who never had tried writing until she found a cabin far up in the Maine woods, among the lakes. She took a canoe trip through that region as a girl, met a handsome young guide—and they have lived happily together ever since. In holy wedlock, of course.

The book has infinite charm. Perhaps because it is written so simply. Which, by the way, isn't as easy as it sounds.

She tells of the country where she and the little family, including a fool dog, have lived five or six years—summer and winter.

It is a region with just five miles of road fit for use—sometimes. The chain of lakes forms their highways. In summer, canoes or motor boats. In winter, after the ice is thick enough, they run automobiles on it.

Mrs. Rich writes of the deer which intrude on her yard—when out of the hunting season—and eat her choicest flowers. And how they must read a calendar, for the day the season is open they vanish from sight. Perhaps over the mountain "to see a man about a horse."

Those Quaint Guides

She writes of the giant forests, owned by an enormous lumber company which won't sell a foot, thus keeping most tourists out. And of the "sports," city hunters who come up seeking deer and fish. And how a really good Maine guide converts himself into a quaint character who has been chawed up by bears and has the scars to show it.

She lives up there through the long, cold winters because she likes to—she has earned enough by writing to go "home" to Boston if she would.

And how she loves the winter and the four feet of snow and the thick ice and the frost-covered trees and the occasional bear tracks in the snow.

I can't quite grasp that. The more I see of winter, the more I like August. And I live in a well-heated home—drive a car with a heater in it when I can get gasoline—and rarely venture into the backyard between Halloween and St. Patrick's day. I am an indoor man.

There is little time to sit around and dream in one of Mrs. Rich's Maine winters. There are thousands of sticks of wood to be sawed and split for the big stove. She says she likes to saw wood—to swing onto one end of a crosscut saw and hear it sing through a birch log and watch the sawdust dropping on the snow. Matter of rhythm, she says. The less you bear down on the saw the better it cuts. I learned that the hard way—as a boy.

A Winter's Food

Matter of food rationing there, even before Pearl Harbor. Because everything must be brought in from the "Outside" before transportation vanishes beneath the snow. Sled once turned over with her and 48 cases of canned goods. That's a lot of food. But strangers—lumbermen and such — were likely to turn up any day. There was one time a few unexpected boarders did show up—and before they could leave, the Rich family was down to a few split peas and some potatoes and salt.

There are some passages I'd like to quote, but I haven't "We Took to the Woods" at my elbow.

I'd like to take a trip to Maine and drop in on Mrs. Rich and her husband some day, invited or not. In the summer time.

I've just gone to look at the indoor thermometer. The fuel experts in Washington say 65 is ideal and healthful. I prefer 70—and if the furnace gets on a rampage and hits 80, I'm not going to call the fire department.

My principal trouble—at home—is my dog Ding. He wants to go out, and he wants to come in—in rapid succession. That's not so bad in summer because he can push open a screen door, regardless of flies and mosquitoes. But he hasn't learned to turn a knob—or shut a door behind him.

I've known some smart dogs—but never one that would shut a door. In fact, I've known a lot of so-called humans who never had learned that.

Arnall Pledges Return of State to Citizens

an inventory of all state equipment and supplies in the governor's offices, gave him his first official taste of just how Talmadge and his aides had conducted business at the Capitol.

"Miss Elsie Ray, the governor's secretary," said Carson Smith, "would never let me take an inventory of the state property in these executive offices. She refused, and I was unable to convince her that it was necessary. The best inventory I can give you is one taken during the latter days of the Rivers' administration."

Orders were issued to Major John E. Goodwin, commissioner of public safety and chief of the State Highway Patrol, to place a 24-hour guard over the state mansion.

"No one is living there right now," said Arnall, "and I am merely exercising what I consider a sensible precaution."

Arnall administered the oath of office to Melvin E. Thompson, who will serve as his executive secretary.

Roan Takes State Farms.

Moseley Roan, of Palmetto, a farmer and attorney, was sworn in as superintendent of state farms in place of Louis Clarke. Roan was ordered to make an immediate inventory on all state-owned property and equipment on these farms, from which Talmadge confessed he had been taking ham and eggs and poultry to "cut down expenses."

Then, Governor Arnall closed up his office and went home to his family at Newnan, where he will live in his small FHA . ome until he has "a chance to move into the mansion." Arnall speaks of the move regretfully. A home man, he'd rather live, he says, in that house in Newnan, "where I can have privacy and quiet."

The ceremonies on the platform built on the front steps of the capitol moved along quietly yesterday.

Before the new Governor, sat all the members of the house and the senate of the Georgia general assembly, the men with whom he will start work today in an effort to restore the government of Georgia to the people and their representatives.

Talmadge Hears Address.

Eugene Talmadge sat a little to the left of Arnall, as the incoming Governor was delivering his inaugural address.

As Arnall pounded home the mistakes of the government he inherited and the efforts he will make to correct those mistakes, Talmadge smiled once or twice.

Talmadge applauded when Arnall reiterated his pledge not to increase state taxes.

But, most of the time, Talmadge sat through the ceremony with a glum look on his face, his lips compressed grimly in an inverted arc.

Talmadge, his elbow clutched by Brigadier General Sion B. Hawkins, his adjutant general, stalked from the platform at the close of the ceremonies without offering to shake hands with the new Governor or wish him well.

A few minutes before noon Talmadge, accompanied by Hawkins, led the inaugural procession from the capitol rotunda to the flag-draped platform. Arnall and his new adjutant, Clark Howell, president and publisher of The Atlanta Constitution, were next in line.

Then, following them through an honor guard of Georgia Tech Naval and Coast Artillery cadets, came the new Governor's pretty wife, an orchid corsage pinned to her shoulder, and their 4-year-old son, Alvan.

Next came former Governors Rivers, Cliff Walker, and John M. Slaton, other members of Arnall's family, Chief Justice Charles S. Reid, Secretary of State John B. Wilson, State Treasurer George B. Hamilton, Comptroller General Homer C. Parker, Superintendent of Schools M. D. Collins and the new Attorney General T. Grady Head, and other state officials.

Crowd Cheers Arnall.

As Arnall stepped on the inaugural platform, cheers of applause swept from the crowds, music was struck up by the all-girl Victory band, and flashlight bulbs popped as photographers, standing on scaffolding erected on the statue of Tom Watson, snapped their pictures.

The program opened with the singing of the national anthem and a prayer. Then Chief Justice Reid administered the oath of office to Georgia's 71st governor. It was 12:09 p. m.

The other constitutional state house officers, Wilson, Hamilton, Parker, Collins and Head, were sworn in by Arnall.

While the new Governor delivered his address, street cars, buses and trucks continued to rumble through the street in front of him, but he spoke loudly and frequently raised an index finger aloft to drive home his points. Part of the crowd lined the sidewalk across the street from him.

He drew heavy applause when he urged the general assembly to lower the legal voting age from 21 to 18 with the declaration that if boys and girls of that age are old enough to fight and die for freedom, "then certainly they are old enough to participate in the affairs of the government they serve."

More applause burst from the crowd when he said that persons who accepted highway contracts while aware of the state's financial position "acted, act and continue to act at their own peril." The outgoing administration left more than $10,000,000 in unmatured highway contracts behind. Arnall said roadbuilding must be stopped because of dwindling revenues.

Warns Jobseekers.

In appealing to the people to help him resist jobseekers, the Governor interpolated one statement with sharp emphasis:

"So help me God," he cried, "this is one time the Governor is going to appoint whom he wants to appoint."

At another point, in saying he would be available to the people who wanted to see him, Arnall leveled his finger at the Governor's office behind him and said he could be found there for transaction of state business.

Talmadge, who spent a good deal of time in a downtown hotel, grinned.

Another deviation from his prepared text was a word of approval for the plan to raise money for the construction of a new cruiser Atlanta for the United States Navy.

"I heartily commend the movement to replace the cruiser Atlanta in the war for freedom."

When the ceremonies were over, Talmadge led the procession off the stand and disappeared.

He left word that he would go to his old law office in Atlanta.

The retiring governor had sat in his office all morning, refusing to see anyone but the immediate members of his Palace Guard and a few selected visitors.

Once he sent for the newspapermen, but when they appeared, he would allow only the reporter from one of the news services inside his office.

Storms at Press.

Executive Secretary Elsie Ray drove away other reporters.

"Get out!" she stormed, trembling with passion.

The official Talmadge reporter said the governor only wanted to say:

"I kept the trust and I am leaving the office unsullied."

Informed that a resolution had been introduced in the senate upstairs to get the United States government to return the million dollars plus he had paid for Tattnall prison, Talmadge, according to reports, said:

"They are just sorry they can't get a chance to cut that million dollar pie. I think it was a very patriotic thing for the state of Georgia to do to pay that money to the federal government in a time of war when they are selling bonds to help finance the war."

To the few friends who got past his doorkeepers, Talmadge said:

"God bless you and I'm not saying good-bye. We'll be back to shake hands with you four years from now."

He made it plain he was leaving the capitol only temporarily and was not bowing out of politics.

In Arnall's office, the Governor-elect gathered with his family shortly before the ceremony was to begin.

The family drifted quietly away after the inaugural exercises.

The assistant attorneys general appointed by Arnall yesterday were Fred Davis, of Savannah; J. M. C. Townsend, of Wildwood, in Dade county; L. C. Grove, of Lincolnton, and Marshall Allison, of Franklin county.

They succeed Andrew J. Tuten, Ed Reagan, Carlton Mobley, Preston M. Rawlins and Lint Johnson, whose offices were declared vacant by executive order.

Farms Enlisted On M-Day for All-Out Fight

Soldiers of Soil Are Given Definite Tasks by President Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Leaders of the United Nations directed their voices today to Maine's potato growers, to Kansas' wheat ranchers, to California's orange growers—and told them, and all their fellow food producers across the nation, how much they are doing to win the war.

"As never before, the entire nation is looking to its farmers," said a message from President Roosevelt.

American food is helping the Russians "destroy Nazis by the hundred thousands, and drive them back," declared Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff.

Lord Woolton, the British food minister, said Axis leaders were depending on American farmers to fail their job but the United Nations were counting on them not to fail.

These leaders' voices, reaching the remotest farms through all major radio networks, were broadcast as part of Farm Mobilization Day.

Production Major Victory.

"In spite of the handicaps under which American farmers worked last year, the production victory they won was among the major victories of the United Nations in 1942," said President Roosevelt, in a message read by James F. Byrnes, the economic stabilization director. "Free people everywhere can be grateful to the farm families who made that victory possible.

"This year the American farmer's task is greater, and the obstacles more formidable. But I know that once more our farmers will rise to their responsibility....

"Food is a weapon in total war—fully as important in its way as guns or planes or tanks."

President Roosevelt said the United Nations are pooling their food resources "and using them where they will do the most good." Australia and New Zealand help feed American soldiers there, he pointed out, while Canada and Latin America send nourishment to Britain.

Litvinoff Speaks for Russia.

Ambassador Litvinoff, explaining that Germany had overrun some of Russia's most fertile lands, said Russian troops could keep on fighting only with food and munitions from the outside. Lord Woolton emphasized that no American food shipped to England would be wasted.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, thanking farm families for their devotion to their tasks, said the government would help all it could this year "but I know how short that help will fall on many occasions."

Colonel William Capers James brought a message from Guadalcanal—"I can tell you that guns and bullets and fighting hard are no more important than proper food."

THERE'S A GROUND ARMY, TOO—When President Roosevelt and other national speakers launched M-day for American farmers yesterday, they found a responsive group of citizens. As the toiler shown here watches planes of the United States Army Air Force fly above in "M" formation he knows that he, also, is a soldier. Farmers began signing agreements to produce more crops at once and all of them are expected to have their names on the dotted line by early February.

Gallup Poll Shows:

England Thinks War Near End

By GEORGE GALLUP.
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 12.—The British people are more optimistic than the American people in their guess as to when the war will end.

Nearly half of all Britishers polled by the British Institute of Public Opinion think the enemy will be licked within a year. In the United States only two in every five are that optimistic.

Of course, not even the best informed government leaders can foresee the approximate time the war will end. Admiral Halsey predicts it will be this year; President Roosevelt in his message to congress hoped that it might be the end of 1944.

Layman's Guess.

The average layman's estimate is, of course, only a guess. But it is important because it reflects relative public optimism or pessimism, and also because a man's guess about the length of the war may condition his attitude toward war programs such as rationing, taxes or the draft, and affect his willingness to accept sacrifices.

In Britain the layman's attitude was measured in a public survey on the following question:

"How long do you think the war will last?"

Britishers Vote.

Here is how Britishers vote. Note that 49 per cent, or virtually half, think the fighting will be over in a year, although 8 per cent think it will take more than two years.

Six months	14%
1 year	35
1½ years	21
2 years	19
3 years	5
More than three years	3
Undecided	3

In the most recent test in the United States, in late November, the American Institute found that while a majority think Germany will collapse within a year, only 40 per cent believe Japan can be defeated and the whole war brought to an end within a year.

Americans Vote.

Another 33 per cent think it will take between one and two years more, while as many as 20 per cent believe peace will not be achieved until anywhere from two to five years or more. The latter figure compares with 8 per cent in Britain.

Prime Minister Churchill recently declared that when Germany is defeated the British government will continue to fight with redoubled effort until Japan is licked.

Evidence that the British people themselves are likewise just as determined to beat their enemy on the other side of the world as they are to lick the Nazis at their front door, is shown in the following British poll:

"Churchill says that when Germany is beaten Britain will continue fighting until Japan is defeated. Do you approve or disapprove of this course?"

Approve	88%
Disapprove	6

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

FREE CHINA.

The Chinese, I am told, render the first verse of the 46th Psalm this way: "God is our refugee camp, a very present help in trouble."

I wonder if we do not have in this bit of translation and interpretation a revealing insight into the very heart of the oldest of civilization and the youngest of modern states.

With astonishing patience and the most matter-of-fact heroism Free China is fighting to preserve her immemorial heritage and, upon the foundation of its essential values, to rebuild her whole life.

Where do we look today for the beating heart of Free China, her rallying point and effective citadel? In terms of geography, we must look to that vast upland basin in the Far West, completely encircled by high and broad mountain barriers — the Red Basin of Szechwan, drained by the great Yang-Tze river. There we find its granary and its refugee camp. The river port of Chungking, the capital city, is the nerve center of national resistance. In this refugee camp some 40,000,000 heroic, sacrificing Chinese have at long last found some measure of relief from the appalling assaults of the wicked invader.

But the truer answer to our question transcends geography and economics. It can be given only in terms of the Spirit of the Living God which animates and sustains the multitudinous life of Free China—that moral sense of calm and assurance which is the distinctive genius of China.

We are told by the best-informed students and observers of the situation in China that the Christian forces in that vast empire have an influence out of all proportion to their actual numbers, and that for those whose faith and vision are directing this great people through their agony of modern war, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ is, indeed, their refugee camp, and a very present help in time of trouble.

General Chiang Kai-shek and his gifted wife, now in this country, are not only Christians in their home, but Christians in their leadership of the people. It is safe to say that no ruler in all history has exhibited stronger personal faith in God and a surer belief in the righteousness of God than has the generalissimo of China. We cannot adequately express our sense of gratitude for this heartening truth.

The call to our people for prompt and increasing aid to Free China cannot be overstated. Japan is hoping to overwhelm China this year, while Britain and the United States are centering their effort upon Hitler. Let us hope, aye, let us hope and work and pray that we may sufficiently reinforce China while we are crushing Hitler to make certain that we do not overtax the already amazing fortitude of China in holding back the ruthless hordes of Hirohito. We have no greater ally than China. May we be altogether aware of this fact and altogether worthy of this opportunity.

party, we're going to celebrate this one at Newnan where all his friends are.

Family Reunion.

"It would be fun," she added a second later with a twinkle in her eye, "to have a birthday party at the Governor's mansion. But Alvan's friends are all at Newnan and they couldn't come up here, so I guess that's out."

Both the wife and mother of the new Governor wore purple-tipped white orchid corsages on their coats. The elder Mrs. Arnall was attired in a black Persian lamb trimmed coat with matching hat and her daughter-in-law wore a leopard coat over a sunny yellow wool dress with a matching leopard skin and yellow wool hat.

While they waited for the ceremony to begin about 50 members of the Arnall family and Mrs. Arnall's father, Philip Slemons, and sister, Miss Margaret Slemons, of Orlando, held an impromptu family reunion in a room over which Georgia Tech cadets stood guard.

Relatives Attend.

At least a small part of the gala celebration was in honor of the visit of the Governor's brother and sister-in-law, Lieutenant and Mrs. Frank Arnall, of Fort Monmouth, N. J. In the procession to the inaugural stand Mrs. Arnall and Alvan followed the Governor-elect and Adjutant General Clark Howell. After them came his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Arnall.

Among the other relatives who were seated on the platform were: Mr. and Mrs. Emil Mann and their little daughter, Susie; Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Walker, Mr. and Mrs. Roger B. Arnall, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Arnall and their children, Dolly Hunter, Hamilton Jr. and Guy Cole Arnall, cousins of the new Governor; Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Peniston, Miss Katie Arnall, Miss Lucille Arnall, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Price, Miss Bartie Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Ervin Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Astin and Miss Bessie Astin.

Shipbuilding Group Formed by Labor Board

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—A shipbuilding commission was established by the War Labor Board today to handle labor disputes and pass on wage questions in the shipbuilding industry employing about 900,000.

On wage matters, the seven-man commission was directed to follow policies laid down by the WLB. The order creating it said the commission's decision on any question would be final unless the WLB should, on its own motion, decide to review it.

'Prop' Airplane Wing Falls on Sonja Henie

DETROIT, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Sonja Henie escaped with nothing more than a head contusion and headache last night when the folded wing of a "prop" airplane fell on her just before the military number of her ice revue here.

"I was still seeing stars when the plane started out," the skating star said today.

By the time it completed a circuit of the arena, however, Sonja had recovered, and completed her skating routine without a mishap.

VIGO, Spain, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Heavy storms in the Atlantic and Biscay region kept two Spanish liners in port today, while a violent windstorm damaged houses along the coast and closed Coruna harbor to navigation.

Big Slice of France Reported Lost In Deal With Hitler

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler has made a 10-point political deal with French Chief of Government Pierre Laval which permanently deprives France of 4,800 square miles of territory comprising two departments along the Belgian border, involves sending 400,000 more skilled French workers to Germany and promises to strengthen Laval's position among the collaborationist French leaders, a Fighting French spokesman said today.

At the same time the long-awaited agreement, which turned down Hitler's reported plan to conscript Frenchmen to fight the United Nations and put Laval in control of the French police in the former occupied zone, with fuller administrative powers generally, contained fewer concessions to the Germans than some observers had expected.

The departments which will not be restored to the French state are those of Nord and Pas-de-Calais, extending from the North Sea southward for about 100 miles along the Belgian border. They are part of the recently created "forbidden zone" in which the Germans are building fortifications and most Frenchmen have already been removed from them.

Part of Agreement.

Hitler strengthened Laval's hand against his collaborationist rival Jacques Doriot, leader of the French Fascistic popular party, to the degree that he assured the former that his government was the last with which Berlin will negotiate.

As part of the agreement Laval promised to turn over to Germany five French destroyers and two large tugs, presumably the remnants of the French fleet scuttled at Toulon.

A settlement was postponed on the question of making Paris the seat of Laval's government, thus leaving open a matter which has vexed Vichy-German relations.

Hitler, under the agreement, will become arbiter of further negotiations between France and Italy, presumably concerning the Island of Corsica and other French territory under Italian occupation.

Control of France.

The agreement gives Germany full control of French industry, finance and agriculture, thus formalizing what is already virtually the fact in these fields.

The French national committee announced, meanwhile, that the French Communist party, which has been outlawed in its Nazi-dominated homeland, has formally aligned itself with the Fighting French organization.

The Communist resolution was brought to London by Fernand Grenier, Communist deputy for Paris, who escaped from a concentration camp where he had been held since the fall of France.

More Canadians Land in Britain

A BRITISH PORT, Wednesday, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Thousands of reinforcements for the Canadian Overseas Army have landed at this British port, it was permitted to be disclosed today.

Cheerful and happy at reaching their destination safely and anxious to complete their training and find action as soon as possible, the Canadians already have been dispersed by several trains to various reinforcement and reception bases.

Although Army personnel formed the greater part of the movement it also included a large group of Canadian Navy personnel returning overseas after leave in Canada.

KILLED—Sidney S. Sparrow, of the United States Marine Corps, yesterday was reported killed while on overseas duty.

S. S. Sparrow, Atlanta Marine, Killed Abroad

Stimson Office Informs Wife of Death on Foreign Soil.

Sidney S. Sparrow, private in the United States Marine Corps, was reported by the War Department last Saturday to have been killed while on foreign service, his wife, Mrs. Louise Sparrow, of 516 Venable street, stated yesterday.

A graduate of the Morgan Preparatory school in Petersburg, Tenn., Sparrow was connected with the Horton Transfer Company when he enlisted in the Marine Corps in December, 1941. He received his training at Parris Island, S. C., was next stationed at Quantico, Va., and then sent to San Diego, Cal., where he remained until being sent overseas this fall.

Sparrow is survived by his wife; a daughter, Loretta; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Sparrow; two sisters, Charlotte and Lillian, and a brother, Robert, all of Atlanta.

Trust Company Moves to Better Georgia Crops

Stockholders Approve Service To Promote State Resources.

Looking forward to the post-war period when "very difficult economic conditions will require the development of new crops, better farm produce markets and a new industrial life," the shareholders of the Trust Company of Georgia yesterday approved the establishment of an agricultural and industrial service department to further promote the state's resources.

The action was taken at the organization's 52d annual meeting, at which Thomas K. Glenn, chairman, and Robert Strickland, president, reported a successful year with an increase of $27,000,000 in deposits of the Trust Company and its affiliated banks.

Net Earnings.

Net earnings for the year were somewhat lower than in 1941, Strickland said, but loans for war purposes in the Atlanta bank alone were more than $19,000,000, although loans as a whole declined $4,224,000 or 16.6 per cent during the year.

ELECTED VICE PRESIDENT—J. M. Means, widely known in Atlanta financial circles, who yesterday was elected vice president of the Trust Company of Georgia at the annual directors' meeting.

Shareholders initially appropriated $25,000 for the new agricultural and industrial service, which will be under the direction of specially trained personnel, Strickland said. It will "co-operate with existing groups, or agencies, either public or private, in the field of agricultural and industrial research, education and promotion," the president announced announced.

Three official promotions were announced by the directors of the Trust Company. J. W. Means was elected vice president; Kary Beavers, assistant vice president, and Robert C. Mathews, assistant secretary.

Veteran Officers.

"All three of these officers have been connected with the investment department of the company for many years and have rendered very valuable services, particularly in the sale of government bonds in the southeast during the past year," President Strickland said.

A hundred and six men have entered the armed forces from the Trust Company groups and 215 women are now employed in the six banks, which include: Trust Company of Georgia, of Atlanta; National Exchange Bank, of Augusta; Fourth National Bank, of Columbus; First National Bank & Trust Co., of Macon; First National Bank, of Rome, and the Liberty National Bank & Trust Co., of Savannah.

Jesse Jones Announces Subsidy on Kerosene

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones announced today a subsidy on the movement of kerosene into the North Atlantic states in drums.

The drums can be shipped in ordinary box cars, and will make more room in tank cars to bring fuel oil to New England.

Jones said the subsidy will be paid by the Defense Supplies Corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which has for many months paid a similar subsidy on the tank car shipments of petroleum products to the east coast, when that more expensive transportation method became necessary because of U-boat attacks on coastal tankers.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

PROMOTED—V. F. Cooper, once manager of the Atlanta branch of the Ford Motor Company, elected vice president of the First National Bank, of Atlanta, after serving as head of the new business department.

Citizens Bank Report Shows Splendid Year

Gains $56,000,000 Deposits During 1942, President Says.

The Citizens and Southern National Bank enjoyed a year of "splendid and healthy growth" and passed the $20,000,000 mark in deposits, a gain of more than $56,000,000, H. Lane Young, president, announced yesterday in his report for 1942.

All directors and officers of the bank were elected without change, Young said. The gain in deposits was "almost exactly twice our gain in 1941" and gave the bank a total increase of $84,000,000 during the two years of defense and war activity, the president explained.

"We are continuing every possible activity which represents co-operation with business and government, in promoting a quick victory," Lane said. "We emphasize again the necessity for all productive capacity to relate itself as completely as possible to war goods and production and where financing is required our bank will co-operate in every possible way. The tide of victory has definitely turned for the Allied Nations, which suggests mainly that now is the time to redouble our efforts."

Bomber Crash Kills 10 At New Mexico Base

ALAMOGORDO, N. M., Jan. 12. (AP)—Ten airmen were killed in the crash of a B-24 Army bomber at the Alamogordo Army Air Base today.

The plane was on a routine flight, the base said, and the cause of the accident will be determined by a board of inquiry.

First National Earns Million During 1942

Promotions Announced as Bank Officers Present Report.

Deposits of the First National Bank of Atlanta increased by more than $45,000,000 during the year 1942 as earnings of the bank soared to $1,074,267.09 after taxes and charge-offs, the 2,421 stockholders were advised at the bank's annual meeting yesterday.

During the period the bank sold $14,800,000 worth of war savings stamps and bonds, James D. Robinson, president, and John K. Ottley, chairman of the board, reported, announcing at the same time several promotions among officer personnel.

V. F. Cooper, former manager of the Atlanta branch of the Ford Motor Company, who entered the bank as head of its new business department when the Ford plant closed, was elected a vice president. He formerly lived in New Orleans.

Other Promotions.

J. Harvey Lester, chief clerk, who began his career as a messenger in the transit department of the Fourth National Bank, in 1913, was named assistant vice president.

John L. Hendon, of the new business department, was made assistant vice president. He is a native of Carrollton and entered the bank's service in the interior department in 1921.

Rufus G. Walker, who has been with the bank and its predecessors for more than 21 years, was promoted to assistant cashier from his former post as manager of the credit and loan department.

Victory First Objective.

"As with all other patriotic and loyal American individuals and institutions," said the report, "the privileged task of giving every possible assistance to our country's far-reaching program of victory has been the outstanding consideration and our shining goal during 1942. Over and above that total and active devotion to our country's cause, we also can point to a fine and forward-looking year in which we set new records of financial achievement.

"Closest to the hearts of all of us, however, is the proud knowledge that 68 of our officers and employes are now serving in the fighting forces of America. They are spread all over the world. Essential war activities have made further inroads on our personnel to the extent that today 68 per cent of our employes are women."

Senate Pays Tribute To Francis Scott Key

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The one-hundredth anniversary of the death of Francis Scott Key, author of The Star-Spangled Banner, was commemorated today in a memorial resolution by Senators Radcliffe and Tydings, of Maryland.

They described him as a "Christian gentleman, devout citizen, and noble character" who serves "as an example today" and gives "us strength to face the trying months ahead until we shall be victorious for 'conquer we must when our cause it is just, and this be our motto, "In God is our trust."'"

Allied Planes Sweep Low Countries After Ruhr Raid

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Allied fighter planes swept over the low countries today to disrupt Nazi water and rail transport after heavy four-engined bombers smashed again last night at industrial targets in the Ruhr with 4,000-pound "block-buster" bombs.

"Many two-ton bombs were dropped" by the bombers raiding the Ruhr for the sixth time in nine days, "and the glow of considerable fires was seen," the Air Ministry News Service said.

One big bomber in the force of undisclosed size was reported lost. The Germans set up heavy antiaircraft fire, but thick clouds blunted their probing searchlights. Nazi night fighters rose to give battle, but "no serious encounter developed," the news service said.

Meanwhile the Ministry of Home Security announced that 109 civilians were killed or reported missing in German air raids during December, bringing the total for 1942 to 3,221.

From the start of the war to the end of 1942, the ministry added, 47,860 Britons have been killed and 56,490 injured in air raids.

Following up the night raid on the Ruhr, aircraft of the fighter command and army co-operation command attacked and damaged water transport and railway targets in offensive patrols over the low countries, the Air Ministry said.

"None of our aircraft is missing."

State To Sell Big Cadillac to Highest Bidder

Anybody who can show the United States government he needs an almost new car in his business can get one from the state of Georgia, if he bids right.

State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr. yesterday announced he was asking for bids by 12 noon, January 15, on the expensive Cadillac Eugene Talmadge bought as his official car, a month after he was defeated for re-election. It's a 1942 model—with five swell tires.

Talmadge bought the car from a dealer in Savannah and paid $3,690.80 for the job—quite a job.

Radio, automatic heater, windshield washer—not a plain windshield wiper—backup lights, fog lights, outside rear-view mirror, day and night rear-view mirror, gas cap lock, license frames.

Talmadge, in three months, put 9,260 miles on the car—a little better than 3,000 miles a month.

"The car will go to the highest bidder," said Thrasher.

H. T. Dobbs, executive vice president of the Industrial Life & Health Insurance Company, was elected director.

Allen Will Tutor Dentists on Taxes

Marion Allen, collector of internal revenue for Georgia, will answer income tax questions of Atlanta dentists tomorrow night when he speaks to the Atlanta Dental Society on "Federal Taxes for Professional Men."

Dr. C. L. Chandler, secretary of the society, announced that Allen will discuss the new features of the 1942 tax bill.

The discussion is scheduled for 7:30 p. m., following the society's monthly dinner and business session at the Atlanta Woman's Club. Dentists of the Atlanta area who are not members of the society are invited to attend, Dr. Chandler said.

Emory Cancels Charter Day Plans

Celebration of Emory University's annual Charter Day, January 25, has been cancelled by the Atlanta Emory Alumni Club and many alumni organizations in other cities may cancel their banquet sessions in co-operation with the program to conserve gasoline and foods, R. F. Whitaker, alumni director, announced yesterday.

The 1,500 Emory alumni in the Atlanta area were notified of the action of the Atlanta officers this week. Nearly 300 alumni usually attend the campus celebration of the chartering of Emory University by DeKalb county, January 25, 1915.

City, State Join Cruiser Drive

Vinson, chairman of the house naval affairs committee, to Clark Howell, publisher of The Constitution:

"I heartily indorse and approve The Atlanta Constitution's campaign to sell enough bonds for the building of another cruiser Atlanta. I have already requested the Navy Department to name a cruiser now under construction Atlanta. The Atlanta went down in the performance of her highest patriotic duty. She and her complement lived up to the highest tradition of the Navy. I cheerfully subscribe $500 for the purchase of bonds for this fund."

"After conference with Chairman Vinson and Navy officials, assurances given new cruiser will be named Atlanta," telegraphed Congressman Robert Ramspeck.

Senator George had wired Monday night, when representatives of The Constitution first sought to launch the bond-buying drive, that he was all for the idea and would fight to have another cruiser named for this city.

The senator wired again last night:

"I learned with pride that The Atlanta Constitution had initiated a campaign to sell enough war bonds to pay for another cruiser to replace the one sunk at Guadalcanal. It is this undaunted spirit of our people that assures America's victory. The Atlanta Constitution is to be congratulated. Walter F. George."

The messages from Washington were no less enthusiastic than the spirit displayed on the home front. Already indorsed by Marion H. Allen, war savings administrator for Georgia, the idea and the determination to get the money for the new ship spread during the day.

The 1,000 or more Greeks of the city were preparing to launch a bond drive next Monday.

"We will buy our bonds to help replace the lost Atlanta," said Nick Chotas, chairman of the Atlanta organization of the Order of Ahepa. The Ahepas nationally are seeking $50,000,000 in war bond sales, and local members have a quota of $250,000 between now and February 22.

Georgia's new governor, Ellis Arnall, commended the Atlanta campaign in his inaugural address yesterday.

"The stern realities of war are being brought home to us every day," he said. "Even this morning we were shocked to hear of the loss of the United States cruiser Atlanta.

"I understand that a movement has just been launched in Atlanta to subscribe enough war bonds to replace this battleship for the armed forces of our Navy. I commend this patriotic response on the part of Georgia."

Mayor Hartsfield's idea for all Atlantans, both those living here now and those away, to have a part in replacing the cruiser, was quickly commended by officials of the war savings staff.

"Every former Atlantan, no matter where he is today, should buy bonds for this great effort," said the mayor. "The boys in the armed services will be happy to earmark their bonds for this purpose, and we should have former Atlantans, all the way from Iceland and Alaska to Africa and Guadalcanal, contributing their bit in this way."

Extra Bonds To Count.

Hartsfield emphasized the necessity for Atlantans to buy more than just the usual amount of "Atlanta War Bonds."

"It's the extra ones we need," he declared. He suggested that if possible the Treasury Department should permit stamping with a rubber stamp the words "Atlanta War Bonds" on each and every bond sold during this drive.

Meanwhile, Fraser and officials of the Chamber of Commerce, formally offered the services of that body to Administrator Allen, and then sat down to the work of mapping the detailed plans for the drive.

"We will announce selection of a chairman to head this campaign Wednesday morning," he asserted.

"We are proceeding cautiously, because we want the people to know that this is a matter for everyone to co-operate in, and is not the venture of any single individual or organization.

"Every organization of every kind—businesses, civic clubs, social clubs, all kinds or groups, should join in immediately and do everything possible to raise this money now.

"And above all, everyone should remember the great importance of this undertaking—it is so big there is no room for selfishness," he said.

During the day the gathering force of Atlantans' determination to see another Atlanta upon the seas began to get results.

Representatives of the Georgia Power Company announced that car cards will brazen forth on streetcar fronts soon urging Atlantans to fall in line and buy "Atlanta War Bonds," and also that a morning radio program, "Just Home Folks," heard over WGST, will turn its attention to this task of letting the people know how much the new ship is needed and how to go about getting it.

The power company also will furnish attractive display cards for merchants' windows and plans a window display for its buildings at once.

As for retail merchants in Atlanta, A. L. Zachry, president of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association, said he believed every single one in the city will fall in and do his part in the campaign without a question.

"I'd like to see them do it, and I believe every single one will," he remarked. "As a matter of fact, I'd be surprised if one of them didn't."

The whole project in Atlanta will have the sincere backing of the Navy, Lieutenant Alderman Duncan, in charge of Navy public relations here, declared.

He set out at the start to have the Navy bring Captain Jenkins, the brave commander, here during the drive, and though no definite answer could be obtained yesterday, he was sure that the hero will come if at all possible.

Kirk Sutlive, deputy administrator of the war savings staff, asserted that his organization will put its shoulder to the wheel with the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations and will help put the job over.

John L. Conner, Atlanta businessman who successfully arranged Atlanta's "Million Dollar Breakfast" last year, pledged to buy $10,000 worth of bonds for the new Atlanta Monday night within an hour or so after the sinking of the Atlanta was announced by the Navy.

He said he considered it a "privilege and an honor" to make the purchase for this purpose, and he promised to aid the campaign in any way he can.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—While assorted strong spots remained in today's stock market, leaders generally exhibited mild stumbling tendencies.

Some customers trimmed accounts pending more light on the tax question in connection with the $100,000,000,000 national budget for 1943. Investment demand lightened to some extent and Wall Street recalled that the market trend in late January has been down in the preceding five years. The war news and individual business situations propped favorites.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Cotton prices were depressed today by the OPA announcement of the freezing of corn prices.

Values slumped more than $2 a bale then regained about half of the loss. Possibility of similar steps affecting other farm commodities touched off a wave of selling at the outset. May contracts dropped to 19.15 cents a pound, a loss of $2.10 a bale. Subsidence of the liquidating movement and a quick rebound in prices attracted some speculative support.

Increased trade buying on the decline was also a factor but trading turned quiet on the upturn and there was an attitude of caution pending further Washington developments.

Late prices were off 95 cents to $1.20 a bale, March 19.47, May 19.38 and July 19.31.

Strong Resistance Suddenly Displayed By Japs at Akyab

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The Japanese suddenly have displayed strong resistance in the defense of Akyab against British troops who have advanced to within about 15 miles of that Bay of Bengal port in Burma, and have landed several thousand troops in Indo-China to bolster the Burma front, it was reported today.

A British communique from New Delhi said the Japanese were "resisting strongly" against continued pressure of Field Marshal Sir Archibald P. Wavell's forces, and a Reuters correspondent with the troops said British patrols had penetrated as far as Foul Point at the tip of the Mayu peninsula.

This peninsula on the west side of the Mayu river appeared clear of the Japanese when the enemy appeared from hiding places in the jungles and hills and attacked in the region of Donbaik where fighting is still going on, the correspondent said. The tip of the peninsula is 15 miles or less from Akyab.

Foe Working Southward.

Meanwhile, Indian patrols were reported working southward near Rathedaung on the east side of the Mayu river.

A Chinese army spokesman was quoted in dispatches from Chungking as saying that several thousand Japanese reinforcements for Burma had been landed in Indo-China. Presumably the Japanese intended to move these men overland rather than attempt the difficult and dangerous transport journey by way of Singapore and the Bay of Bengal to Rangoon.

The spokesman said that the Japanese force at Akyab was estimated at fewer than 2,000 men about a month ago.

Meanwhile, Allied Air Forces in India and China were being increased week by week and the British communique announced a new series of raids against the Japanese in Burma.

Jap Station Attacked.

Pintha railway station in central Burma was attacked and engines and rolling stock destroyed, two small Japanese steamers on the Chindwin river and near Akyab were damaged, buildings and railway trucks at Kyaikthin, and a number of villages near Akyab, including Rathedaung and Laungchaung were bombed.

Brigadier General Clayton L. Bissell, commander of United States Army Air Forces in India, Burma and China, said at New Delhi that United States air strength was increasing every week while the Japanese power was on the down grade.

American fighters and bombers went on 50 per cent more missions in December than in November, destroyed 16 Japanese fighters, probably destroyed 11 and damaged three, he reported. Five fighters, including three in China, were lost.

Twenty-five of December's missions were from India and 20 from China, he said.

Edward Higgins, of Glendive, Mont., recently broke his record for plane deliveries by arriving at an Indian base from Miami in 66 hours and five minutes, Bissell announced.

'Unselling the Best' Retailers' Big Job

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Retail sellers have a big war job ahead of them—unselling the American public on "the best of everything," Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional director of the War Man-Power Commission, said today.

"It isn't a challenge," she said. "You have a hard job to do, which only American selling genius could tackle successfully."

Mrs. Rosenberg said women customers will have to be told, "You can cook just as well in any old pot."

The woman man-power boss of the New York area said retail stores of the country had accomplished a magnificent task in readjusting selling methods so far.

U. S. Bomber Crew Destroys Axis U-Boat

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Credit for the destruction of an Axis submarine in the Bay of Biscay was given today to the crew of an American Air Force Liberator bomber piloted by First Lieutenant Walter Thorne, of Marietta, Ohio. Praise for accurate placement of the depth charges dropped by the plane went to First Lieutenant Irving T. Colburn, of Chicago.

Child Burned to Death Kissing Father's Picture

LONDON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Three-year-old Doris Watson didn't know quite what it meant that her father was a prisoner of war in Germany, but she did know he had been gone a long time and decided to kiss his picture on the mantelpiece.

She died with his picture in her hands when she climbed on a chair to reach it and her nightgown caught fire from an open gas heater.

POWERS "FIND"—Rosalind Russell is just one of many screen stars who began their careers as Powers models. Georgia girls who might possess the qualifications for being a model are sought by Loew's Grand theater in a contest now being conducted in co-operation with The Constitution.

Contest Offers Opportunity to Georgia Girls

Many Stars of Screen Began Their Careers by Entering Competition

More than a dozen of Hollywood's top actresses and actors began their careers as Powers models and many of them were "discovered" by Powers through talent contests such as the one being conducted now by Loew's Grand theater and The Constitution.

The Loew's Grand theater is offering a $25 war bond and 26 guest tickets to the five girls who show the most promise of becoming prospective Powers models. The contest is open to all Georgia girls between the ages of 18 and 25 years.

Contestants are not required to appear in person at the theater to compete for the prizes. The girls should only send in their pictures to the Powers Model Contest Editor, The Constitution, before Friday morning. Judging will be based on the girls' photogenic qualities. The winners' pictures will be submitted to John Powers, head of the famed model agency.

Norma Shearer, Joan Bennett, Barbara Stanwyck, Rosalind Russell are just a few of the screen stars who were "discovered" by Powers. Fredric March and John Barrymore are among the actors who began their careers as models.

All pictures will be returned to the respective owners by Loew's Grand theater.

Bike Rationing Rules Liberalized by OPA

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Bicycle rationing was liberalized in the east today because of the gasoline shortage.

New bicycles formerly could not be purchased except by persons in essential occupations who had no car and could show a definite need for a bike.

A new order today permits ration boards to authorize bicycle purchases in the east by anyone, regardless of occupation, who needs it to go to work or to perform his job.

In the rest of the country, students were added to the list of eligible purchasers, and ownership of an automobile will no longer prevent a person from getting a ration certificate for a new bike.

Coast Guard Gets House That Inspired Alger

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The house in which Horatio Alger wrote most of his rags-to-riches books, Newsboys' House, will be turned over to the boys of the Coast Guard tomorrow.

The seven-story structure which has sheltered thousands of lost, friendless and poor boys since its founding in 1872 will be used as a receiving and transfer depot for Coast Guard recruits, it was announced by the Children's Aid Society, which operates the institution.

Alger lived in the home and collected material from the boys for his popular tales. Many of the boys followed through and actually went on to fame and fortune.

BOND SALES.

McDONOUGH, Ga., Jan. 12.—Henry county exceeded its bond quota by $9,000 in December. The monthly assessment was $11,000, and total sales were more than $20,000.

Atlanta's Bing Flies to New Fame in Africa

Exploits of Local Pilot No Surprise to His Father Here.

Atlanta's Captain Andrew J. Bing, whose exploits against the Germans in North Africa might well form the plot of some post-war chiller-diller, has done it again.

This time he mixed flying skill with guesswork and came out of a situation that might have been pretty tough, according to a dispatch from John Thompson, the Washington Times-Herald's correspondent, who wrote of the 25-year-old Atlantan's being shot down near Kairouan.

"He crash landed between the lines during a battle and saw two groups of soldiers rushing toward each other," said Thompson. "He picked out the one he thought to be French and ran that way, hiding in some bushes until they arrived—and happily found that they were French."

Bing is one of a group of young Americans flying Lightning fighters from a primitive advanced airfield in North Africa on the milk run to Tunis and Bizerte, or on the daily harassing raids over Sousse, Sfax and Gabes, Thompson said.

Bing, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bing, of 2440 Peachtree road, N. W., first hit the headlines November 24 when he and two other Georgians smashed a German-held airdrome. 'At that time he complained "They apparently didn't want to mix with us."

Of Bing's latest adventure his father, an executive with the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, said he wasn't surprised.

"He's a fine flyer," said the father.

1,800,000 Weddings Set Record for Nation

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—More than three and a half million men and women in the United States said "I do," and became husbands and wives during 1942, setting an all-time high for marriages in America, statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company reported today.

They estimated that about 1,800,000 marriages were performed during the year, an increase of 80 per cent over the number for 1932, the low point of the depression.

Candy in Trade for Dead Japs Starts Brisk Solomons Barter

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 12.—(AP) Handfuls of candy in reward for dead Japs have won the native warriors of Guadalcanal to the American cause, reports Captain Irving C. Cassell, 24, of Marine Corps Intelligence.

"It's a game with the natives out there, who hate the Japs for their mistreatment," he said.

"The Solomon islanders, who had their gardens robbed—the No. 1 sin—first thought the Americans and Japs were fighting together, but they soon learned differently.

"One day several natives were found after having killed some Japs for personal reasons. The Marines gave them candy.

"The next day an outrigger canoe came across from another island bearing four or five dead Japs and several grinning natives. They wanted to trade the dead Japs for more candy.

"It was a game. They liked it and so did the Marines.

"The natives have organized a scouting service to aid the Marines and it is not rare for natives to come to officers and tell them locations of Jap patrols."

Palm Reading Prediction Comes True in Wedding Here

• • • KATHRYN BARNWELL is thinking of taking up palm reading as a serious business. And here's the reason why.

One evening about six weeks ago, while she was serving in the Officers' Lounge sponsored by the Atlanta Hospitality Committee at the Georgian Terrace, she met Lieutenant Ed Bentler, of Detroit, Mich. When the lounge closed at 10:30, Lieutenant Bentler asked her to go dancing at the Rainbow Roof with him and a group of his brother officers. During one of the intermissions, the subject of fortune telling came up, and Kathryn, who had made a desultory study of palmistry for her own amusement, undertook to read the palms of the members of her party.

When she looked at Lieutenant Bentler's palm, she astounded him by informing him that he would be married in a month to a girl whom he did not even know at that time. The lieutenant laughed and lightly dismissed the idea as absurd.

But last Monday afternoon, Kathryn was leaving the Paradise Room after the cocktail hour when someone called to her. It was Lieutenant Bentler. He wanted to tell her that her prophecy had come true, for he was married last Saturday to Lida Clark, of Atlanta, at a quiet ceremony at the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer. And after a courtship of exactly one month from the date on which he had met his bride!

Now do you wonder that Kathryn is seriously thinking of acquiring a tent and a crystal ball, as real competition to local clairvoyants?

• • • AN ATTRACTIVE visitor expected to arrive in the city during the weekend is Mrs. Webster Thomas, of Upland, Cal. Mrs. Thomas is the former Elinor Williams, of Dothan, Ala., and she will be the guest of her mother, Mrs. Stella Foy Williams, at the S. A. E. house on Fraternity row at Emory University. Mrs. Williams, you know, lived in Dothan before coming to Atlanta to serve as "house mother" for the S. A. E.'s.

Mrs. Thomas, who was one of the most popular belles who ever grew up in Dothan, attended Hollins College and was a school mate of Runa Erwin (Mrs. Fred) Ware and Catherine Candler (Mrs. William Jr.) Warren, of Atlanta, both of whom she visited here. In fact, she was one of Catherine's bridesmaids when she was married to Dr. Bill Warren Jr., and made a host of friends in Atlanta.

Mrs. Thomas completed her education at the University of Alabama, and it was while she was a student there that she went to California as sponsor for the university football team when it played the University of California in the celebrated Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

• • • BESIDES being her second wedding anniversary, December 29, 1942, will always stand out for Virginia Frey (Mrs. James) Bailey as an especially memorable date. The most important and thrilling of the day's exciting events was talking, via long distance, with her husband, Captain Bailey, who is somewhere in the Pacific. It was the first time in a year that she had heard his voice!

Earlier in the day, Virginia had attended the marriage of her good friend, the former Marjorie Coleman, of Marietta, to Lieutenant Warren Harding Jones, of Virginia and Mobile, Ala. It was a nostalgic occasion for Virginia, for it brought back vivid memories of the day she had spoken her own vows in the same Marietta church.

Mrs. E. B. Boatner, popular Marietta soloist, sang "I Love You Truly" and "To An Evening Star," the same songs she had sung at Virginia's wedding. And, as it so happens, the selection of an identical musical program was due to a coincidence in sentiment, the two songs having also been sung at the marriages of Virginia's and Marjorie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mayes Frey and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Coleman.

Virginia, who hails from Marietta, is now making her home here with two other war widows, with whom she shares an apartment, having taken a civil service position at the Atlanta post office. She is a petite and attractive blonde and, needless to say, Marietta's loss is certainly Atlanta's gain.

No less adept at winning new friends, however, is Captain Bailey. He first served as a lieutenant, the rank he held when sent to the Pacific theater in the early stages of the war. When he was promoted to captain, the men in his company presented him with an entire new outfit as tangible evidence of their admiration and affection!

Dorothy McGuire Draws Ace Director For Her Movie Debut

By Louella O. Parsons.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 12.—(INS) If Dorothy McGuire knows her movies she will be patting herself on the back and figuring she has a necklace of horseshoes draped around her—for she gets Edmund Goulding as her director. No director handles women's stories with more finesse than Eddie. Some of Bette Davis' finest pictures were handled by him and before that several Gloria Swanson hits. He understands the feminine psychology and also has the patience for the job.

That is why I say the little McGuire girl is lucky. As big a hit as she is on the stage in "Claudia," the camera and the movies are something else again. Eddie has been seriously ill for months, but when Bill Goetz heard he was on his feet again he stepped out and signed nim pronto for this popular comedy-drama for 20th Century-Fox.

Alan Ladd's departure for the Army January 16 has thrown a monkey wrench into Paramount's plans. He was to have started "Incendiary Blonde," the life story of Texas Guinan. But because Ladd has such a prominent part it is now indefinitely postponed. So Betty Hutton, now out of a job as Texas, is being taken care of in the Bob Hope comedy, "Let's Face It." She gets the lead instead of another one of Paramount's singing ingenue roles. Alan won't be here when the stork delivers his package to Sue Carol, his bride. But when Uncle Sam calls all else is unimportant.

Alan Curtis hasn't been confining himself to any one particular honey since he and Ilona Massey separated. But it isn't fair to say that he and Louise Albritton are just getting in form for their romantic roles in "Destiny," when they step out which, as Damon Runyan might say, has been "More than frequent of late." "Destiny" is a Universal drama that has been rumored for everybody from Dietrich to Gloria Jean. Shall we be polite and say that Miss Albritton must be somewhere in between these types? Anyway, "U" sets great store by the tall beauty (she's nearly five-feet-seven) and has given the publicity department the "G" sign on her.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: Maureen Elizabeth Reagon, two-year-old daughter of Jane Wyman and Lieutenant Ronald Reagon, entertained 25 children at her birthday party. Can it be love between her and Daniel Milland? Anyway, the hostess enlivened things by hauling off and letting Daniel (Day's two-year-old son) have one. He blew out all the candles on the cake before Maureen had a chance and it was more than she could bear.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD COLLECTED AT RANDOM: Edna (Mrs. Red) Skelton, dancing with a tall, dark and handsome at Ciro's and was she dressed to the teeth! Rumor is strong that Kay Harris ("Tillie the Toiler") and Henry Freulich, photographer, are having matrimonial misunderstands; Madeleine Le Beau is in a dark room following an eye operation; Lois Andrews tossed a birthday party for the boy friend, Lionel Newman, and the cake read "Happy 27th Symphony;" Lynn Bari and Sid Luft actually cooing at the Beverly Tropics; Doris Malloy, successful screen writer, and Lieutenant J. M. O'Neill are planning an altar march; Loretta Young, godmother to Maureen O'Sullivan's son, presented the young man with a diamond studded locket; Jean Lavalle, Preston Sturges' comely secretary, is in the hospital for observation for a possible appendectomy. She recently made a successful screen test. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Girl Can Best Kill Gossip By Treating it Casually

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:

I am in love with a soldier, and his cousin thinks that I run around with her husband. I have never had anything to do with married men, but he brought me home from town one night and his wife has told everybody in the neighborhood and also added things to the story of which I know nothing about. His mother believes it, and she is going to write him about it. Should I write him first? He has asked me to marry him in March. I know when he hears of this it is going to hurt his heart. Should I go on and ignore what people say—what must I do? Please give me some advice. GRACE.

I think his family is very narrowminded and under any other circumstances it would be best to ignore them and let them know that you do not give a continental what they think. Since they are going to write to your beau in the service, and fill his head with such silly things it is up to you to beat them to it. The best way you can do this without making so much out of such an innocent incident is to mention very casually the next time you write to your fiance that so-and-so brought you home from work (or town, whatever the case may be) and asked about him. Make the reference to this man as indifferent as possible and pass on over the incident as though it were just one of the many little happenings in a day. Since there is nothing to it, the more you say and the more you try to explain, the more involved the thing will become, and before you know it you will make something out of nothing. If the family write him anytming different, and he asks you to explain anything, tell him that if he takes their word against yours, it is his privilege, because you love him and are faithful to him, and if he does not trust you, you know that he does not love you. I think the least said about the situation the best it will be, although you have got to be on the defensive for your own self satisfaction and your own self interest. If you let his family think that you are afraid for them to write him they will believe that there is really something between you and this man. If they say they intend to write, tell them they needn't bother, for you have already written.

INFORMATION ABOUT DIVRCE

Dear Dixie:

I am writing to you for information on how to obtain a divorce. I have been separated from my husband only a short time and he is asking my consent for him to get a divorce. Naturally, if he wants a divorce I want him to have it. I do not know anything about divorce laws nor how to go about obtaining a divorce. Who must I go to to get one? Will I personally have to appear in court? What does a divorce cost? How long does it take to get a divorce in Georgia? Please do not advise me going back to him, for its better that we stay apart.

Go to see a lawyer in your home town and he will make the necessary arrangements. Prices for divorce vary. Also the time limit, for it depends upon the term of court in which the suit is filed. Some counties have courts more often than others, so the locality in which you live will determine that. In Fulton county there is a court term every two months. The lawyer you engage will give you all the necessary information as well as handle the case for you.

BOY MAY NEED SOME COMPETITION

Dear Dixie:

I am 16 and am in love with a boy 17. Here is the problem. He is always dating other girls and never approves of my dating other boys. Can you tell me how to hold him, for I love him very much. M. B.

Boys at this age are very fickle and as a rule they think all of the girls are crazy about them. Ask him sometimes why he dates others, yet thinks you should sit at home alone. I think he needs a little competition, so go on out with the other boys every chance you get. I think your best method with this boy is the good friend role, for if you let him see you are so much in love with you it will be your loss, for he will skip out. Let him be the one who is the chaser and the the attentive one.

QUALIFICATIONS FOR THE SPARS.

Dear Dixie:

Please give me some information about the SPARS. Are married women eligible if their husbands are in the Navy? Are there any height restrictions? Where can one enlist? What are the duties and are the qualifications rigid? M.

Married women may join the SPARS if their husbands are in the Navy. All other information may be obtained by writing Lieutenant Mildred McFall, Navy Procurement Office, Healey building, Atlanta, Ga.

MY DAY: Waiting For Train In USO Lounge

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Monday.—Owing to the fact that my daughter and son-in-law, who were coming in from Seattle, Wash., by train yesterday morning to do some very urgent business here in Washington, arrived several hours late, I spent some time in the Union Station waiting for them.

I think I signed several hundred autographs in the USO lounge and I talked about my British visit to a number of boys. I noticed one boy, with an MP band on his arm, standing around for quite a time and I later found that he was from Albany, N. Y., and that he had worked in the Ten Eyck hotel, so he had often seen my husband and myself when we lived in Albany. I suppose, not being able to get home, it gave him a sense of being nearer home to talk to someone who knew his home town.

In the afternoon I went to the exhibition at the Pan-American building of a photographic contest held in 18 American republics. I thought the photographs were particularly interesting because they showed such a good cross section of each country that one really saw what the whole country was like.

There are some really beautiful photographs among them, both of scenery and of types of people. I never realized before how similar all old people become, no matter how different their types may be in middle age!

There also are some very interesting wooden carvings in a room just opposite the room in which the photographic exhibition is held. All in all, I think there is a great deal of interest to be found in the Pan-American building. So I was glad to find a good many people there and hope the experiment of opening it on Sunday afternoons will be successful.

I walked up from there with two young girls who had just come from the deep south to work in Washington and who were seeing their first snowstorm. They both seemed very happy about their experiences and work here, which was pleasant to find. I left them at the Corcoran Art Gallery to go in to look at Elliott O'Hara's water colors, which are on sale there for the benefit of the Russian Relief Fund. These water colors were painted in Russia in '39, before the war reached the country. They are beautiful in color and they gave me more sense of sunshine and of the Oriental influence on Russian architecture that I previously had.

A few friends had supper with us last evening and we saw a short film of our visit in Great Britain, which was sent us by Mr. Brendon Bracken, the British minister of information, and then a film entitled "A Journey for Margaret," which I hope a great many people in this country may see. The spirit and feel of it is very remarkable.

So Your Husband's Gone to War—

How to Keep Your Children Happy While Daddy Is at War

By ETHEL GORHAM

CHAPTER IX.

What is important is that war is bad—but there are things worse. And you owe your children, no matter how young, a reason why.

Where is Daddy, Mummy? Will he die? What happens when you die?" the child asks.

"Why is Daddy going to kill other people, Mummy? Are the Japs really bad? Are the Germans mean? Do they always like to kill people?"

Older children will shy away from abstract answers. Younger ones won't understand them at all. You can't tell your 12-year-old son about "liberty" and "equality" and "democracy" without honestly pointing out how short of the mark they are here. You must tell him that at least there is the chance of "liberty" and "democracy" in America—while Fascism would give a lad his age nothing to look forward to but enslavement. And because there is still the chance here to make democracy a working thing, you must tell him how to do it. Since racial intolerance is one of the most obnoxious tenets of Nazism you must point out how important it is for us to wipe it out in our own country, beginning first in his school. Because women are held in such contempt under Fascism, you must remind him how vital it is that in America Susie gets the same chance to go to school and work and study as Johnny. You can't have freedom, you must tell him, unless it is freedom for all—and that means freedom from poverty, freedom from hunger, freedom from overwork, underpay, indecent houses, worry.

Because his father is away from home fighting you must give him a cause to be fighting for as well as against. That is something a 12-year-old can understand.

Even with very young children you must not make it too simple. You cannot say, in black and white, that Germans are bad; so are the Japanese; but the English, Canadians, Australians, Americans and Dutch are always good.

Little Hilda who goes to school with your child is German. "Is she bad, Mummy?"

"No," you answer. "But little Hilda is different."

"Why is she different?"

You cannot tell your child it's because little Hilda lives here now. You know there must be Germans in Germany who are "good" today. Even though it might be simpler to make an open-and-shut case of right and wrong you can't do it.

You, too, must remember that the word "democracy" is not an abstract one. Be grateful that our generation isn't carrying on as inanely as the one in the last war!

We haven't changed the name of sauerkraut back to liberty cabbage. We know the difference between Nazis and Germans.

The best sign of how far ahead we are in democratic spirit as a people is that in this war we play Beethoven and Brahms and Schumann and Schubert without question.

We honor those German refugees who have found a haven on our shares. They teach in our universities, edit our magazines, write for our newspapers, paint pictures we go to see.

"We're fighting the enemies of these Germans," we can tell our children, "when we fight the Nazis."

One of the things you can sensibly tell your children is how broke you are. You cannot start too soon to have them co-operate with you fully in the financial upheaval.

Hush-hush about money is ridiculous. Let them know that one of the things that went with Daddy was former comfort. Indeed it is one way to bolster up Daddy's place in your household. They must never forget that life was different when he was there.

Hold on to as many of the forms and customs of your family life as you can. You cannot shatter young security too much if there are still the birthday parties to give, the anniversaries to remember, the dog to be walked, the grandmamma to visit. But do not hold on to a meaningless shut-eye against facts when even the dullest child can see how things have changed.

There is, of course, no need to be unpleasantly frank. It's just as easy to give children a personal satisfaction in helping in a crisis as it is to scare them into it.

Does Nancy crave a new doll or new skates or a new scooter? You can answer her this way:

"Daddy is fighting a war, Nancy. He needs all the things that go into those skates to help him fight it. Don't you want to help?"

Will you help?—Magical words with a child! Not only does Nancy forget to weep over the lack of new skates, she's proud to know she has given her father a scrap of steel.

"We can't afford it" needn't be words of discipline and impatience. They can be a friendly exchange of regret. "Well, too bad, maybe another time."

You'll find your children want to help in the war effort. The ways they can do it are up to you. Younger children will be delighted to save their pennies for war stamps. Make them earn these pennies. It will give them a full sense of working with you and helping their father, too.

Older children aren't satisfied, however, with merely working for stamps and watching their defense books grow. Nor do they feel that doing without a new bike or a new suit is enough.

Let them pile up newspapers and scrap. Let them save tinfoil. Let the older boys participate in any of the afterschool groups that the Scouts or the Y's or the churches have organized. Older girls can take first aid, study nutrition. Let them do anything that will make them feel they are doing "something"—only do not let them neglect their education!

Whether you continue on the job you had before the war, whether you stay on at home, holding it more solidly together now that separation has hit it, or whether you look for a new job, for patriotic or financial motives, there is one thing you know you have to do for your children.

"Daddy isn't here, but I am," you say. "Let's do things together."

Not only will it bolster your children's sense of family, it will tide you over many a tight and lonely spot.

If the house gets too lonesome on Sunday, and even dinner at home seems intolerable, what about a picnic? Pack a box and take a ride out to the farthermost green spot. Children take such a delight in these excursions, and though it may wear you out, you'll be too preoccupied with their enthusiasm to let your own wish-he-were-here mood weigh you down too heavily.

If you live in the country and are minus a car, see if you can manage to have neighborhood children in as weekend guests. It may be more trouble, more bedmaking, more dishes, but it will be worth it in the fun you will have. Then be the best kind of hostess possible. Wear your prettiest house coat. Don't let the children romp off merrily, as if it were any weekday. Make your presence felt in the way children love adults most. As the teller of stories. As the director of games. As the supplier of delicious tidbits of food, in pretty colors, worked out like party food.

When you're young the world should be made up of happy things. Amidst all the worry and dread today, a child's world should still be a joyous one. You owe it to your children and to your husband to make it so. Never forget. It is one of the things he's fighting for.

To Be Continued

Hereabouts, even in winter, a picnic is not uncomfortable at North Fulton park where there is a grill in each picnic shelter. You can engage the grills by calling Cherokee 9217. There is no charge. And by all means, take your children to the Children's Museum at Fernbank, 849 Clifton road. It is open to the public Sunday afternoons. The Cyclorama at Grant park together with the zoo is one place you ought to see, too, as well as your small fry.

An Optomistic Outlook on Influenza

By Dr. William Brady.

Some physicians and health authorities have a foreboding of an epidemic of influenza this winter. They remind us that there was a rather widespread but comparatively mild epidemic of the flu the year previous to 1918, and that we had a fairly widespread but comparatively mild epidemic last winter. Then, too, there is again Europe at war and large concentrations of American troops in camps. O these observations it may be that we are about to have an outbreak of the disease, but somehow I doubt it.

For one thing we learned a bit about sanitation and prevention of infection in the World War No. 1. For another, the men in the Army today are physically superior to the average of the soldiers of 1917-18. They have had the advantage of better nutrition—not just better food or more of it, but the improved nutrition through childhood and youth that has been brought about through the newer knowledge of nutrition. And so I believe the armed forces of the country today are endowed with more immunity against respiratory infection than the men of 1917-1918 had.

No vaccine or serum as yet developed will immunize against influenza. Physicians have long recognized that influenza, unlike infectious diseases in general, confers little or no natural immunity through one attack. Indeed it seems as though the individual who has had one attack of flu and recovered thereafter is rather more susceptible to the disease than before. This makes one feel skeptical of the prospect of developing a vaccine or serum that will protect against influenza.

Another characteristic feature of influenza is that it seems to produce no leucocytosis—that is no increase in the number of leucocytes, white corpuscles, scavenger cells, in the blood such as occurs with most acute infections, and perhaps this failure of the leucocytes or phagocytes to mobilize explains why influenza is so virulent. Not only do the phagocytes fail to mobilize for defense against the invader but it would seem that effective fifth column work softens the body for attack by influenza virus, for very often there is actual leucopenia, that is, a decrease in the number of leucocytes normally on guard against noxious disease germs.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Afraid of Dark.

Solved the problem of fear of the dark, by giving my child a small flashlight to keep under his pollow. His knowledge that he could himself dispel the darkness seemed to remove his fear of it. A bedlamp he could turn on might do as well, but small boys love flashlights. (M. D.)

Answer—Thank you, sir. If the baby is trained from the beginning to sleep in darkened room without any lamp, there will be no fear of the dark—unless such fear is instilled by injudicious stories or unless the child finds elders are themselves afraid of the dark.

Cleft Palate.

Please give your opinion as to the best time to perform the operation for the correction of cleft palate. Our baby is six weeks old and has cleft palate.

(Mrs. C. F. M.)

Answer—The earlier operation for cleft palate or for harelip or both (they usually occur together) is done the better the cosmetic and functional result will be. Best time for the operation is as soon as the baby is in good nutritional condition and gaining.

Sunbaths.

Please advise me how to go about taking sunbaths.

(MRS. D. C. J.)

Answer—First, find your sunshine. Then begin a clockwork schedule of exposures, twice daily, about 10 a. m. and 2 p. m., exposing front surfaces of forearms only for five minutes first day, same for 10 minutes second day plus five minutes exposure of front of legs, same for 15 minutes exposure front of arms, 10 minutes front surface of legs, five minutes front thighs, on third day, and so on, gradually increasing area and duration of exposure until you stand an hour or more of exposure of entire skin surface without getting burned.

Mother, Mix Your Own Cough Syrup. It's Fine

Quick, Comforting Relief. Saves Money. Easily Mixed.

This well-known medicine, mixed in your own kitchen, costs little, but it gives delightful, swift-acting relief from coughs due to colds. It takes but a moment to prepare—it's so easy a child could do it. It saves real money.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar and 1 cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. Thus you make a full pint of really splendid cough medicine and you get about four times as much for your money. It never spoils, lasts a family a long time and children love its taste.

And for quick, blessed relief, you'll say it is truly wonderful. It has a remarkable action. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action in coughs and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Chirologist

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21-April 19 (ARIES)—Excellent influences predominate the entire day making this an auspicious time for almost any endeavor. You meet and give loyal support to those with whom you are associated, and dealings with influential or superior people tend toward success and prosperity.

April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Before 1:36 p. m. think carefully before you enter into new obligations. This is not an auspicious time for transactions around land, dealing with women, matters of art and domestic affairs.

May 21-June 20 (GEMINI) — Before 1:38 p. m. a feeling of nervousness, apprehension, or it may be extravagance, surrounds new beginnings, and you will probably have a desire to plunge into something. More will be gained by waiting and avoid thinking in too lavish terms.

June 21-July 22 (CANCER) — Give more attention than usual to details during the entire day for it will be easy to overlook opportunities. Strict care should be taken of any promises given.

July 23-August 22 (LEO)—Before 12:37 p. m. will be the time to do those things you want to dispose of quickly. Action and plenty of it can be obtained now.

August 23-September 22 (VIRGO)—Before 2:41 p. m. and after 8:31 p. m. is an excellent period, especially in matters that involve mental effort. Contacts with others should result agreeably, and this will be an auspicious time for dealings with those who are at the head of affairs.

September 23-October 22 (LIBRA)—The entire day favors new and important undertakings. You may have opportunities to accomplish something towards your highest ideas today and until 10:43 p. m. Good-will and co-operation should be more easily obtained.

October 23-November 21 (SCORPIO)—Throughout the entire day and until 7 p. m. does not particularly favor seeking favors, especially the seeking of a raise. Previous to 8:45 p. m. suggests caution in travel.

November 22-December 21 (SAGGITTARIUS)—The morning hours and until 12:53 p. m. are likely to be filled with petty irritations. This is a time to use caution in travel, communications, in the making of contracts, and everything that requires your signature.

December 22-January 19 (CAPRICORN)—Before 3:05 p. m. you will be inspired to enter into affairs that are original and quick, and life may be moving very fast around you. There is apt to be much commotion around you which leads to a nervous tension.

January 20-February 19 (AQUARIUS) The entire day may be considered favorable for all lines of endeavor. Be active and energetic in promoting all matters. The afternoon hours are more favorable than those previous to 1:27 p. m.

February 19-March 20 (PISCES)—If you are wanting affairs to be completed in a hurry today, you are likely to be disappointed. Greater satisfaction will be obtained by following routine.

Miss Louise Rogers Becomes Bride of Dr. Bedford Davis

MRS. M. BEDFORD DAVIS.

The marriage of Miss Louise Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. Rogers, to Dr. M. Bedford Davis was an interesting event of December 26, taking place at 6:30 p. m. in the chapel of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church. Dr. Arthur Jackson and Dr. Ryland Knight officiated, and Mr. and Mrs. Paris Lee presented the music.

Palms formed a background for a central arrangement of white gladioli and snapdragons, flanked on either side by seven-branched candelabra holding lighted white tapers.

James Davis was best man for his brother, and the lovely bride was given in marriage by her father. Dr. Arthur Codington and Donald Bickers escorted the guests to their places.

Miss Marie Rogers was her sister's maid of honor and wore a gown of victory blue taffeta made with a long basque, with a sweetheart neckline and a long, full skirt. She carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds. Mrs. Sara Davis and Miss Angela Wilkerson, the bridesmaids, wore gowns of rose taffeta fashioned like that of the maid of honor, and carried bouquets of rose-colored gladioli.

The bride was never more beautiful than in her handsome wedding gown of white slipper satin. The bodice was made with a sweetheart neckline outlined with seed pearls and centered with a rose design embroidered in seed pearls, which were the same ones used to ornament her mother's wedding gown. The sleeves were fashioned leg o' mutton and the long, full skirt fell from the low waistline to form a train several yards in length. Her tulle veil was caught to a coronet of Venetian lace and orange blossoms, the latter having also been a part of her mother's wedding ensemble as well as the strand of pearls she wore as her only ornament. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses, gardenias and narcissi.

Mrs. Rogers wore for her daughter's wedding a model of royal blue lace and her flowers were orchids. Mrs. M. B. Davis, mother of the groom, wore a costume of defense blue crepe with a spray of gardenias and pink roses.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Rogers entertained at a reception for the bridal party, families, out-of-town guests and close friends. The bride's table was overlaid with a lace cloth and centered with the tiered wedding cake which was outlined with narcissi and fern.

Later in the evening the couple left for their wedding trip, the bride traveling in a costume of royal blue velveteen with which she wore matching accessories and a shoulder bouquet of gardenias. They will reside at 2080 North Decatur road, apartment 19, in Atlanta.

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

Missed the Game

I wondered whatever had become of Pete Demetros after his visit at the Huntington a few days prior to the Rose Bowl game. . . . Allan Shi's former helper at Tech High was stationed in the Mojave desert and had come in to see some old friends from Georgia. He met all the boys, talked with the coaches and said he would be back for the game.

PETE DEMETROS

The next word from him was received yesterday in the form of a letter from officer candidate school, Fort Sill, Oklahoma. A color picture of Demetros standing beside a tent in the desert was inclosed. Demetros takes over from this point—

"Dear Jack—

"Am sorry that I didn't get to see you again before I left Hollywood. It so happens that I received orders for the January 1 class here and left on the 28th. I did get to listen to the game, though.

"Talk about West Point being tough—well, here we are under West Point officers but must learn it and master it in three months instead of three years. But—the tougher it comes the better I like it; of course, we must get down a little firmer and drive a little harder, but that's what makes our soldiers and officers the best in the world.

"At the present, with my studying, I am putting in about an 18 or 19-hour day—but I know with every extra effort, that it might get one more Nazi or Jap—so I can't do too much for Uncle Sam, 'the coach of the team.'"

Proud To Serve

When we saw Demetros hard desert training had put him in great condition, a match for any fighting man anywhere, and he was proud and happy to be a part of a vast program to establish world order.

His letter continues . . . "This is one game where condition, mental attitude, poise, and the will—~~will~~ decide, and, buddy, this team that Coach 'Uncle Sam' has gotten together, with plenty more coming up, will really do the job. And I am really proud and privileged to be on the squad.

"We all won't be at the banquet when the letters are given out—but our hearts and spirits will be.

"So with the sincerest wishes for a happy, healthy New Year, and a handshake in thought . . .

"Sincerely, Pete J. Demetros."

Demetros was asking about his old sidekick Allan Shi when we last saw him. He hadn't heard about the result of the second Tech High-Boys' High game and it gave him a great kick to learn that Shi's boys had triumphed.

"I'll be back to help him win more often when this business is over," he said.

You can't beat that spirit, man.

Tech High Boys

"This might interest you," Demetros added in a letter which just arrived. . . . "Captain Joel Eaves, Captain Sid Scarborough and Sergeant Neill Baldwin are all stationed here in officer candidate school. Ran into them today. Lieutenant Bill Ellis is in Oregon, Lieutenant Norman Perry is in the Signal Corps. We all played on the same teams at Tech High in '32. They all went to Auburn and I to Mercer. All Smithies, too.

"Do you remember Colonel T. L. Alexander, now of the 74th brigade? He was line coach at Tech High then. Well, his son graduated from O. C. S. today. Now that makes Colonel Alexander and his twin sons both Lts. . . . Smithies, too.

"You recall Al Simmons, formerly of the Athletics. He lives at the hotel I always stop at in Hollywood, the Roosevelt. He's in the defense industry now. Quite a job with a certain aviation corp. We played golf—I should rather say he did—but he can still swing a club, and is in splendid condition. I meant to tell you that while in Pasadena.

"It is amazing and remarkable how similar the business of war is to football, only much grimmer. It is still the club with the most capable reserves, plus the spirit and incentive—and Uncle Sam as a coach has no equal. That's why it is the greatest team in the world."

Mickey's Boy

Sports in short or, in short, sports: Young Gordon COCHRANE, son of the famous MICKEY of Philadelphia Athletics' fame, is a student at G. M. A. . . . Promised Mickey we'd drop out and take the youngster somewhere for a passel of spare ribs. . . . Note from Clinton (Bud) HARRIS, who formerly coached and taught at Georgia Military Academy, reveals he is in charge of a first-rate physical program at the Naval Air Gunners' school in Hollywood, Fla. . . . He has been doing this sort of work for more than a year. . . . Rex ENRIGHT said, on his recent visit with the South Carolina Gamecocks, that the service, in addition to taking all coaches except himself, also has accounted for three of the four janitors. . . . Rex was hard hit in football, losing Stan STASICA, Steve NOWAK and then NORMAN, an all-star guard, among others. . . . The Gamecocks might have been Southern Conference title contenders. . . . As a basketball coach, Rex once had the job wished off on him at Georgia and won a Southeastern Conference championship. . . . Not bad. . . . And he's not bad today as a pinch-hitter for the duration. . . . An old comrade of the sports wars, Waxo GREEN, of the Nashville Banner, is with the Commandos in the African campaign. . . . Last time we saw him he was whacking his way out of the rough on a Nashville golf course. . . . It was good Commando training. . . . It made us proud to read how quickly the boys went out and got some Japs in honor of the memory of Joe E. BROWN'S boy, DON. . . . I know how good it made the great old trouper feel. . . . Jasper DONALDSON, former Cracker secretary, is faring well abroad as a Seabee. . . . If the Southern League is so sure to fold up, as one local smarty insists, the Cracker management is sure wasting a lot of time getting the field ready. . . . Earl MANN was on jury duty and couldn't be reached for a statement. . . . He could have made only one, however. . . . He simply would have pointed out that a new manager, having been signed, will report in late February and that everything will be in readiness.

PARTNERS SHORT.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Sparring partners are at such a premium that Manager Lester Krell dons the gloves daily as Lightweight Joey Peralta, of Tamaqua, Pa., prepares himself for his Friday night bout with Chalky Wright, of Los Angeles, in Madison Square Garden.

PARKER TO REPORT.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12.—(AP)—America's No. 2 tennis player, Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, dons an Army uniform Saturday. He probably will be assigned to Hammer Field, near Fresno.

Parker has been employed in the special effects department of a Hollywood movie studio.

Athens To Fete Georgia Team At Big Dinner

Complete Movie of Bowl Game and Sidelights Will Be Shown.

ATHENS, Ga., Jan. 12.—Georgia's Rose Bowl champions and coaches will be guests at a gigantic appreciation dinner at the Georgian hotel next Tuesday night, it was announced today by a special citizens' committee appointed to arrange the celebration.

D. Weaver Bridges, chairman of the committee, said the feature of the evening would be the showing of a complete movie of the Rose Bowl game, along with pictures of the trip to Pasadena and activities while in California.

Mr. Bridges said there would be a principal speaker, to be announced later, but declared no talks would be of any length. He said others to appear on the program would include Coach Wallace Butts and Captain Frankie Sinkwich.

"This is one of the greatest honors Athens has ever had bestowed upon it, and we want these boys and these coaches to know how much we appreciate what they have done for our city and our university," Mr. Bridges said.

All members of the varsity team will be invited to the dinner, which starts at 7 o'clock.

North Fulton, Decatur Split Pair of Tilts

North Fulton and Decatur split a pair of basketball games last night at the North Fulton court. The girls' game went to North Fulton by a 30-to-20 count, while the Decatur boys jumped out in front and led all the way for a 34-to-15 win.

The Decatur boys held a commanding 19-to-4 lead at half-time. Everyone on the squad saw service in the tilt, and as a result the scoring was pretty well distributed. Hodges, with eight, topped the winning attack. Lindquist was best for North Fulton.

In the girls' game, the shooting of Dorman and Drummond, who tallied 14 and 12 points, respectively, highlighted the winning offensive. Williamson scored nine to grab scoring honors for Decatur.

ANOTHER HARMON—Lieutenant Bill Harmon, guard on the Cochran Field quintet which plays the Celtics at Sports Arena Monday night, is a brother of Footballer Tom Harmon. However, he needs no support from his illustrious brother, having been captain and all-conference forward for the Tulane court team only a couple of years ago. In a game Sunday he netted 17 points to lead the Soldiers' scoring.

Purples Trip Smithies; Typists Upset G. M. A.

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.

Yesterday was a thrill-packed, frenzied day of action in the Big Six Prep Basketball League, and when it was all done there was news aplenty of upsets, what with Boys' High snapping Tech High's winning streak at 12 straight, Commercial High bowling over supposedly impregnable G. M. A. and Marist winning its first loop game at the expense of Fitzhugh Lee.

As expected the Purple Hurricane-Smithie row was a killer-diller from whistle to whistle, but it was a bit surprising to see Shorty Doyal's Hurricane sweep into the lead on Jordan Maynard's quick opening field goal and never relinquish the lead as they swept to their third consecutive league victory and undisputed Big Six leadership with a 39 to 27 verdict which gained for them a morsel of revenge for Tech High's upset grid win over them in the Milk Bowl.

Ray (Swifty) Echols led the Purple gunners until he was ejected via the foul route late in the third quarter. He bagged nine points, all when they counted most, and whisked in to steal the ball from amazed Smithies time and again.

After he fouled out towering Scott Reynolds took charge by bagging nine points in the final quarter to give him a total of 12 for the night. It was Reynolds' rifling which broke the Blacksmiths' hearts after they had pulled up to within three points (26 to 23) of the Purples in the final stanza. Dan Roberts was a ball-of-fire on the defense and Tommy Touchstone played a magnificent game as he and Reynolds controlled the ball off both backboards, and Tommy edged Reynolds for high point honors with 13. It wasn't the old 13 jinx that beat the Smiths but a ball-hawking Boys' High quintet.

Captain R. H. Elliott and his "Five Coaches" at G. M. A. were warned Coach Shirley Watkins had turned out a tough outfit at Commercial, and the Typists went to College Park to demonstrate just what the lads were talking about. They did a great job of it by coming in on the long end of a 23-to-21 count as Eli Carlisle bagged the winning goal in the final minute. Carlisle, "Country" Lowry and Abe Rousso were the heavy artillery, with Carlisle getting eight points, two less than G. M. A.'s ace, Regan.

Jerry (Blondy) Doyle, brother of Johnny Doyle, ex-Boys High sharpshooter, fired in 16 points to pace Marist's fine victory over Fitzhugh Lee, 35 to 25. Perry Roberts found the net for 10 for Lawrence Whalen's five, the same number tossed in by Horace Groover of Bill Smitha's Fitzhugh quint. Jack Carver netted eight tallies.

Giants Train At Lakewood; Ride Buggies

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The New York Giants announced today that they would train at Lakewood, N. J., laying out a practice diamond on the golf course that is part of the former John D. Rockefeller estate here.

The Giants' base is about 65 miles from New York and slightly farther from the metropolis than Asbury Park, N. J., the seashore resort which the Yankees chose yesterday.

Agreement on Lakewood followed a conference today between President Horace Stoneham and a delegation from Lakewood.

Secretary Edward Brannick, in making the announcement, said a groundskeeper would be sent to Lakewood tomorrow to mark off a practice diamond at the first hole of the golf course and the task of preparing it for big league baseball would be begun immediately.

The diamond will be about two miles from the hotel where the players will be quartered, and Brannick said arrangements would be made to transport the players in horse-drawn carriages. A 45-room hotel will be opened for the exclusive use of the ball club.

Manager Mel Ott, who has been here several days lining up training plans, said the entire squad probably would report March 15.

Kirkwood Tigers Defeat Stars, 7-0

Led by James Heinold, Roy Carlton and Billy Mewborn, the Kirkwood Tigers defeated a group of high school gridsters, 7 to 0.

The play of Gene Chandler, of Tech High, and Buck Miller, Boys' High backfield, was best for the losers.

Wrestling Program Set

ALL MATCHES ONE-HOUR LIMIT

With every match from the main event to the opener, having a one-hour time limit, wrestling fans are assured an action-packed evening on Friday when the mat sport is resumed for the benefit of underprivileged families of Atlanta. Proceeds will be turned over to the Ten Opportunities Fund of The Constitution.

Here is the mat lineup for Friday, beginning at 8:30 p. m. at the city auditorium:

Main Event—Cowboy Luttrell vs. Roland Kirchmeyer.

Semi-Final—Al Massey versus Rudy Strongberg.

Opener—Dory Roche versus Clint (Tiny) Kenmon.

This is as fine a program as mat fans have had the privilege of seeing in some months, and is a sample of what is in store for the future.

A pass list is being suspended for this particular show, inasmuch as all proceeds, including concessions, will be used for charitable purposes.

Busses and street cars provide transportation to the auditorium, giving fans easy access to the scene of the wrestling action.

So there will not be any misunderstanding, it is stressed by the matchmaker that service men will be admitted at half price.

Bobwhites' Day Arrives As Arnall Takes Over

Conservation Governor Repeats Pledge To Inaugurate Nonpolitical Wildlife Program.

By JOHN MARTIN.

That crisp, cheery note you heard coming over the hill was the whistle of Bobwhite, Georgia's brag bird, which knew by the subtle intuition that Nature gave him that "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Bobwhite struck up the note with the bands at the capitol yesterday and he bore down hard as Governor Ellis Arnall raised his hand in solemn oath to uphold the constitution of the state.

Arnall became Governor of Georgia at 12:10 o'clock and his inauguration gave the state its first conservation executive in history. He went into office as the champion of the sportsmen and of the wildlife that is an American heritage.

And in a vigorous address that transcended all of his campaign speeches he laid down his program, blow by blow.

While a handfull squirmed in discomfort and hundreds cheered approval, Arnall closed the door to cheap politics and racketeers and thrust a verbal saber into pressure groups.

This was pointed at the two-bit groups that have formed a flock of vultures around wildlife legislation, just as it was a warning to all others.

The conservation Governor, bearing in mind his pledges to give his state a non-political, commission-director game and fish department, said:

"It is my recommendation to the general assembly that a non-political game and fish commission be created and placed in control of affairs of the wildlife department."

This was sufficient. It was a reassurance to the farmers and hunters and fishermen that Georgia faces a new era in its hitherto badly abused outdoors. And in it, there is no place for the system or the personnel that now holds forth.

Yes, yesterday was Bobwhite's day. No wonder he was singing "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Head of Chisox Farm System Dies Suddenly

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—(AP)—William J. (Billy) Webb, 47, director of the Chicago White Sox's farm system and former coach of the Sox, died of a heart attack today at the wheel of his automobile within a block of Comiskey park.

He was en route to the park and had pulled over to the curb when stricken. He was found slumped in the seat by a streetcar conductor who left the trolley to investigate. His widow and a seven-year-old son, Billy Jr., survive.

Webb, a gifted third baseman, never was a star in the major leagues, but played for 19 years in the minors. A native of Chicago, he started his professional baseball career with Duluth, of the Northern League in 1916. During ensuing years he played second, third and shortstop for Birmingham, of the Southern League; Newark, Toronto and Buffalo, of the International League, and Binghamton, of the New York-Pennsylvania League.

Seminary Sextet Trips Russell, 32-6

Washington Seminary's strong cage squadron made it two victories in two starts when it easily subdued Russell High girls yesterday at Russell's home court, 32 to 6.

The Seminary attack was headed by Sheffield and Frasier, who scored 13 points each. The winners did not permit Russell a single score in the first half, which terminated with them leading, 17 to 0. Smith, Dew and Kelley, with two points each, accounted for Russell High's points.

The Seminary freshmen defeated Russel freshmen, 28 to 8 in a preliminary game.

Ship Is Named For Lou Gehrig

SOUTH PORTLAND, Me., Jan. 12.—(AP)—The Liberty ship Lou Gehrig, named for the late major league baseball player, will be launched next Sunday at the South Portland Shipbuilding Corporation's west yard.

Arthur Sewall, 2nd yard executive, said today that Mrs. Christine Gehrig, mother of the former New York Yankee ball player, would sponsor the craft.

The name for the cargo vessel was selected by school children of New York state in the recent salvage campaign. Three New York school pupils, not yet identified, will act as joint sponsors of the ship.

Gamecocks Nip Bulldogs, 43-35 In Fast Contest

Jim Griffith Scores 17 For Georgia, 10 in Last-Half Rally.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 12.—(AP) The University of South Carolina Gamecocks trimmed the Georgia Bulldogs, 43 to 35, in one of the fastest basketball games played here in recent years.

A capacity crowd of 2,500 watched the Bulldogs pull up from the sort end of a 23-14 halftime score to within five points of the Gamecocks but fail to close the gap in a wild final three minutes of play.

James Griffith was the power behind the Georgians' recovery as he scored 17 points, 10 of them in the second half.

The game was one of fast-breaking scoring plays and constant interceptions, and the outcome was never certain even when the South Carolinians held a 10-point lead early in the contest.

Celtic Tickets Placed on Sale

Tickets for Monday's professional basketball classic at Warren Sports Arena featuring the original New York Celtics against the powerful Cochran Field Soldiers were placed on sale yesterday at Reeder & McGaughey's Sporting Goods and Adam Hat Store.

The game will be played at Warren Sports Arena and officials predict a big turnout despite gas rationing, pointing out that three street car lines running within two blocks of the arena are available to the public. They are the South Decatur, East Lake and Soldier's Home lines.

Belated Honor Finally Comes To John Mize

Pesky and Hughson Win Places in First Full Year on Job.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Featuring seven players selected for the first time, the annual major league all-star team, picked by 260 members of the Baseball Writers' Association, was announced today by the Sporting News.

Two of the all-stars, Johnny Pesky and Tex Hughson, had the distinction of being chosen after their first full season in the big leagues.

The voting also brought belated recognition to Johnny Mize, Enos Slaughter and Mickey Owen, acclaimed the sophomore success of Ernie Bonham and marked the emergence of Morton Cooper as one of the best pitchers in baseball.

NEW SLAB STAFF.

Hughson, Bonham and Cooper gave the team an entirely new pitching staff.

With Bobby Feller and Cecil Travis in military service last season, the baseball writers made virtually a clean sweep of the 1941 all-stars by turning out three Brooklyn players, Pete Reiser, Dolph Camilli and Whitlow Wyatt, as well as Bill Dickey, of the New York Yankees, and Thornton Lee, of the Chicago White Sox.

Honors for 1942 went to six players from the American League and five from the National, including three each from the Yankees and Boston Red Sox, two from the St. Louis Cardinals and one each from the Dodgers, Chicago Cubs and New York Giants.

The lineup and season records:

First Base—Johnny Mize, New York Giants, .305.

Second Base—Joe Gordon, New York Yankees, .322.

Shortstop—Johnny Pesky, Boston Red Sox, .331.

Third Base—Stan Hack, Chicago Cubs, .300.

Center Field—Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees, .305.

Right Field—Enos Slaughter, St. Louis Cardinals, .318.

Catcher—Mickey Owen, Brooklyn Dodgers, .259.

Pitchers—Morton Cooper, St. Louis Cardinals, 22-7; Ernie Bonham, New York Yankees, 21-5, and Tex Hughson, Boston Red Sox, 22-6.

GORDON IS LEADER.

DiMaggio was selected for the sixth straight year but, after being a unanimous choice three times previously, he finished fourth in the total vote with 210. Gordon topped the list with 255, followed by Cooper with 250 and Williams with 247.

Williams and Gordon were named on the team for the fourth time and Hack edged in for the third time by nosing out Ken Keltner, of the Cleveland Indians, 95 votes to 91.

Gafford Married; Army Is Next

AUBURN, Ala., Jan. 12.—(AP)—Roy "Monk" Gafford, sparkplug of Auburn's backfield, and Miss Jacquelin Bagwell, formerly of Birmingham, were married Saturday night, it was announced today.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. W. C. Cowart at the Methodist parsonage here. Clarence Grimmett, a teammate of Gafford's at end, was best man.

Gafford is a fourth-year student at Auburn. He and his wife plan to remain here until he graduates in June, when he is scheduled to be commissioned in the Army.

WOMAN BOXER.

WICHITA, Kan., Jan. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Ella Rominsky, 83, died Sunday. In her younger days she was famed as a woman boxer. She once was widely publicized as a sparring partner of the late John L. Sullivan and for years she and her husband toured the country with a circus, engaging in a fast-paced boxing and bag punching act.

NATS AT HOME.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 12.—(AP) Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators of the American League, said here yesterday that the Nats would train at home this spring. Griffith said the players would use some diamond in Washington other than their home field at Griffith Stadium, which will not be in shape due to the returfing after the football season.

Touchdown Club Party 'Sold Out'

Only Chance To Attend Now Is To Have a Good Friend.

By JACK TROY
Constitution Sports Editor

Going, going, gone—unless you know a friend.

That's the status of tickets for the big Atlanta Touchdown Club party Saturday week.

Plight of one Touchdown member yesterday was somewhat pathetic. He forgot members had to have tickets, so he unwittingly gave all of his away.

P. S. He had a friend who helped him out.

Everett Strupper, club president, suggested yesterday it would be apropos to outline some of the things to look for in Ken Stambaugh's remarkable color films of the Georgia-U. C. L. A. Rose Bowl game.

PROFIT BY MISTAKES.

Saw the picture the other day, a private showing with Sam Kane, through the courtesy of Eastman and Stambaugh.

Things to look for, among other things, include what Bill Stern missed. (Period).

Namely:

(1)—Lamar Race Horse Davis (not Charley Trippi) running the opening kick-off back 43 yards, and almost going all the way.

(2)—Red Boyd, of Dalton, Ga. (and not George Poschner), blocking Waterfield's punt in the fourth period for an all-important safety.

(3)—Leo Costa kicking extra point after Sinkwich scored, and the referee in the end zone appearing to be warming his hands at a fire as he made the wrong signal. Costa's kick was plenty good. The referee saw the handkerchief and thought Georgia was offside. And how wrong he was.

RED BOYD
(He Blocked Kick)

WATERFIELD WILD.

These are some of the things to look for. Ken's great pictures show details of the play that escaped many eyes—Georgia receivers open and passes thrown to men who were covered; U. C. L. A. almost scoring once and with receivers in the clear a couple of other times, only to be overthrown by Waterfield.

The between-half card tricks, goal posts being torn down before the game ended, color of the crowd, etc., go to make up a terrific pictorial record of Georgia's initial Rose Bowl trip.

This is to be only one of four bowl pictures to be shown during the Touchdown Club party, which begins, with a noon luncheon and continues until late evening Saturday week.

F. D. R. Okays 2 Nationwide Fund Drives

Centralized Relief Plan, Red Cross Receive Approval.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt approved today a plan for two major money-raising campaigns for relief activities this year, one in the spring by the American Red Cross and the other in October for "a national war fund."

The latter will replace the various individual campaigns for the United Service Organizations, Community Chest and council, those of certain state war chest organizations and the drive of major foreign relief agencies.

The formula for the two campaigns was presented in a report of the war relief control board of the War Relief Control Board of which Joseph F Davies, former ambassador to Russia and to Belgium, is chairman.

Davies said that Winthrop Aldrich, of New York, had agreed to assemble a group of organizing trustees for the National War Fund. He said they would be "the focal point from which the 48 states, the 600 Community Chest cities and the many unorganized counties are to be approached in the formation of a central and national voluntary and civic organization."

President Roosevelt issued this statement:

"I am glad to approve of the report of the War Relief Control Board. I note with special satisfaction the provision for the wide participation in planning and operation of this enterprise which makes it far more than just another campaign.

"It will contribute greatly to our unity, enthusiasm and power in the war effort when it joins our concern for our own men and women in the service, our support of our fighting allies and the nations enchained, and our determination to hold the line on the home front.

"This clears away any national drive which might compete with the most important Red Cross campaign in March."

Getting The Range at Fort Mac

Technician 4th Grade Seymour L. Shapiro, of Fort McPherson, who had probably the longest continuous case of poison ivy of any man in the Army, has at last been compensated for his trouble.

Sergeant Shapiro has been stationed in the Fourth Service Command laboratory at Fort McPherson and part of his job was to gather poison ivy leaves from which a poison ivy cure can be made. Because he is extra sensitive to the poison ivy, Sergeant Shapiro has been afflicted almost constantly for several months.

This week, however, compensation came to the sergeant in the form of a commission as first lieutenant. He left for Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where he will be stationed.

Lieutenant Shapiro is a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., and entered the Army in July, 1941.

When Zenith Sears conceived the idea for the Hillbilly Jamboree program that is presented over station WATL each Saturday night from the Reception Center at Fort McPherson, he thought he had a pretty good program in mind.

The boss agreed—and so did the public.

Today, Sears isn't so sure.

For Radio Expert Sears is now Private Sears, having been inducted into the Army last week, and his first Saturday night in khaki found him enjoying the hillbilly program. Enjoying the program, that is, until the master of ceremonies called him to the mike and persuaded him to compete in the amateur contest. Private Sears gave forth with "Frankie and Johnnie," accompanying himself on the piano.

The master of ceremonies gave forth with the booby prize.

Bunkmates are asked to refrain from mentioning the program to Private Sears.

A lady and her uniformed escort boarded the jammed Atlanta-bound trolley in front of Fort McPherson the other evening—and a gallant soldier, leapt to his feet to offer the lady his seat.

She graciously thanked the soldier and took his place, while her escort remained standing in the crowded aisle.

Civilian passengers were a trifle startled later to see every soldier on the trolley suddenly jump to his feet and come to attention.

As the gentleman took his place beside the lady, they noticed two silver stars gleaming on each shoulder of his overcoat.

He was Major General William Bryden, commanding officer of the Fourth Service Command.

The WAAC recruiting office at Fort McPherson has been moved uptown to 321 New Post Office building, and will handle future enlistments of Georgia women in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Second Officers Virginia S. Martin and Elizabeth H. MacDonald, formerly at the post, are now downtown in the new office.

Technician 4th Grade Thomas B. d'Antignac, of Augusta, will report to Fort Benning to begin officer training on January 30, he was advised this week.

Sergeant d'Antignac is the son of Mrs. Lansing B. Lee, of Augusta, and was teller for the Georgia Railroad Bank and Trust Company before he came in the Army last February. He has been stationed as an interviewer in the classification section at the Fort McPherson Reception Center.

He attended Richmond Academy in Augusta and graduated from the University of Georgia in 1930.

Georgia Girl Will Christen Vessel Today

Betty Jane Hardy To Take Part in Alabama Launching.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., Jan. 12.—(AP)—Out on a farm near Milledgeville, 16-year-old Betty Jane Hardy has been practicing for a month swinging a pop bottle to see just how hard a blow it takes to break it.

Tomorrow noon at Mobile, Ala., she will substitute a bottle of champagne—quart size—for the pop bottle and take a crack at the bow of the S. S. Lawton B. Evans, a Liberty ship, as it slides down the ways of Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding Company.

Young Miss Hardy and four other Georgia school children picked for their scrap collecting records will participate in the launching of the ship, the 20th Liberty vessel built by the Alabama company in the last 12 months.

The Evans will also be the last ship of this type built by the company which now turns its facilities to construction of 21,680-ton tankers instead of 10,500-ton freighters.

The Evans is named for a distinguished Georgia educator. Besides Miss Hardy, other Georgia school children participating will be Odell Smith, of Sandersville; Royce Califf, of Hardwick; Albert Raechels, of Putnam county, and Richard Haynes, of Lithonia.

Congress Drive On To Adopt Ruml's Plan

Representative Carlson of Kansas Spearheads Move in House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—A concerted drive for the Ruml plan, to put personal income taxes on a pay-as-you-go basis by skipping 1942 taxes, developed in the new congress today.

Representative Carlson, Republican, Kansas, spearheading the movement, told the house that 27,200,000 citizens now are "in debt to the federal government for taxes on their 1942 income, an increase of 23,300,000 since 1940," and declared the country cannot afford to continue its present "shaky system" of collections.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee — confronted with a presidential recommendation that $16,000,000,000 additional be raised in taxes and compulsory loans this year—prepared to open hearings in a week or 10 days.

A system of pay-as-you-go individual income tax collections probably will be the first problem considered, with proponents hoping to complete the current collections legislation before 1942 taxes fall due on March 15.

When the committee turns to the $16,000,000,000 problem, the possibilities of a federal retail sales tax, along with compulsory loans, no doubt will be considered, some prominent legislators said.

Present tax, loan and savings laws will return an estimated $33,081,245,000 to the government, and the $16,000,000,000 more would bring a year's total to approximately $50,000,000,000, or almost one-half the $109,000,000,000 wartime budget submitted to congress yesterday.

While Carlson pleaded today for enactment of a pay-as-you-go bill he has introduced embracing the Ruml plan, Representative Reed, Republican, New York, interposed to say that discussions of the Ruml proposal should not be taken by the public "to mean that they are not going to have to pay taxes." The Kansan agreed.

Under the Ruml plan, payments would apply to a current year's taxes, instead of the previous year's.

State Groups To Help Ease Food Shortage

Committees Will Be Formed in 6 Georgia Cities This Week.

Local committees will be organized this week in Atlanta, Macon, Columbus, Savannah, Augusta and Brunswick to ease food supply shortages, T. Walter Hughes, state supervisor for the Food Distribution Administration, announced yesterday after a state committee was organized in Atlanta.

Hughes called the meeting in Atlanta and Scott Allen, C. S. Breeman, Leon Carter, F. L. Douglas, B. B. George, Walter Graefe, Marvin P. Green, A. Heinman, J. D. Jay, A. Lichtenstein, Jack Mazier, J. D. Moss, E. S. Papy and M. Rich were named on the state committee along with Hughes

Representatives of the food manufacturing, processing and distributing industries gathered at the state office building to form the state committee which will investigate and attempt to correct food shortages as they develop in Georgia.

An office will be set up in the six cities already selected and others will be established if the need arises. The local committees will attempt to solve local problems, but if they cannot do so, they will be taken to the state group for remedial action. If the state body cannot handle the problem, it may be taken directly to Washington.

Local and state committees will have the co-operation and will function closely with the Food Distribution Administration and OPA.

Federal Jury Indicts Five in Lynching Case

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 12.—(AP) A federal grand jury late today returned two indictments charging four private citizens and a deputy sheriff, all of Jones county, Mississippi, with a violation of federal civil rights statutes in the lynching of Howard Wash, Negro, at Laurel, Miss., on the night of October 16, 1942.

The first indictment named Nathanial Shotts, Allen Pryor, Barney Jones and William Oscar Johnson. The second indictment named these four and in addition Luther Holder, deputy sheriff and Jones county jailer.

Frank Coleman, Roanoke, Va., special assistant to the United States attorney general, announced the indictments and said his department's investigation indicated the four citizens were "ring-leaders" of a mob estmated at between 50 and 100.

Public Hearing Is Set On Railroads' Petition

The public yesterday was invited to attend a hearing before city council's public works committee at 2 p. m. tomorrow on a petition of the L. & N. and A. C. L. railways to close a stretch of Chester avenue, formerly known as Delta place.

For the concession, the companies agree to increase the headroom of the Krog street underpass extending from Decatur street to Tennelle street from 11 feet and five inches to 12 feet.

Under the proposal, the companies ask that Chester avenue be closed beginning from the south side of DeKalb avenue and extending southerly to a point appproximately 300 feet north of the intersection of Wylie street and Chester avenue.

Traps Vapor Of Coffee for Second Cup

PARKVILLE, Mo., Jan. 12.—(AP) Dr. Harry G. Parker, retired Park College chemistry professor, traps coffee vapors for that second cup.

From numerous experiments the professor concluded he could get twice as many cups from the usual portion of coffee by boiling it an hour—and as tasty if he could capture the vapor.

He rigged up a chemistry flask joined to a glass funnel by a hollow cork. As the coffee boils the vapor rises into the funnel where it condenses against a cover and drips back into the coffee.

The professor has no intention of seeking a patent on his glass gadget (cost 60 cents). His only interest is that second cup at the breakfast table.

Flynn Scores Opposition to Appointment

Calls Attack on Him by Senator Bridges 'Purely Politics.'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Edward J. Flynn, retiring Democratic national chairman, said today the opposition to his appointment as minsiter to Australia was "purely politics." The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will decide Friday whether to hold hearings on the Flynn appointment, which Senator Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, has termed an "insult to the people" of Australia.

"The men making these charges against me know there is no basis to them, but they know they can get the headlines by using my name," Flynn told a press conference at Democratic headquarters.

No Prediction.

He said he had no idea whether the Foreign Relations Committee would decide to call a hearing, and would make no prediction regarding his confirmation.

Asked whether he would request Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, of New York, to testify in his behalf in the event the committee did hold a hearing, he said it was up to the committee itself to decide whom it wanted to hear. La Guardia, here to testify on the fuel oil shortage, indicated he would not appear at a Flynn hearing unless subpoenaed, telling reporters:

Foreign Affairs.

"I'm not running foreign affairs. I've got enough to tend to running my own town."

Flynn said he would be available the remainder of this week, but would leave Saturday to attend a Chicago meeting of the Democratic national committee, called to name a successor to him. Postmaster General Walker has been prominently mentioned for the post, but Flynn had no comment on whether he would be selected.

Flynn reiterated his denial to charges—of which he already has been exonerated by a Bronx grand jury—that he used New York city paving blocks and labor to pave the courtyard of his estate.

Brown Raps 'Secret' Raise For Northcutt

Fulton County Official Says He Knew Nothing of It.

A "secret" increase of $50 per month in the pay of Assistant County Attorney Stokely Northcutt by the Fulton county commission was criticized yesterday by Vice Chairman Charlie Brown.

The minutes of the first meeting of the reorganized commission last Thursday showed that the increase had been given.

"The first I knew of it was when I read the minutes," said Commissioner Brown. "The minutes are supposed to show what happened at the meeting. I was present and heard nothing said about the raise.

"I understood that Ralph Pharr was to be replaced as county attorney by Harold Sheats solely as an economy measure, the job of one assistant to be eliminated. I don't begrudge Northcutt the raise, but it's bad to do it without discussion and under the guise of economy."

Commissioner I. Gloer Hailey, who proposed that Sheats be elected county attorney in place of Pharr and that Sheats' position as assistant attorney not be filled for the sake of economy could not be reached over the telephone for comment last night.

The minutes of the commission regarding Northcutt read:

"Commissioner Duncan nominated Stokely Northcutt as assistant county attorney for the year 1943. The nomination was seconded by Commissioner Almand and upon roll call received the unanimous vote for assistant county attorney of Fulton county, his salary to be increased in the amount of $50 per month, beginning February 1, 1943, and it was so ordered by the board."

Blackout Called Miserable Failure By CD Director

Atlantans underwent another "surprise" blackout last night, lasting 15 minutes, which was described by George M. Phillips, Civilian Defense director, as a "miserable failure." "We pulled it to see how well the organization was functioning," he said. "We found that our organization is far from being perfected."

The blackout started at 8 p. m. and ended 15 minutes later. Persons were quiet and kept within boundaries, according to police and others questioned in the downtown area. However, lights, bright lights were observed. Several store buildings with blackout switches had blazing lights and Neon signs. The Union station was well lighted as were several other buildings.

An ironical situation was found when a group of 25 selectees were stranded on a viaduct trying to get to a restaurant.

Remainder of Director Phillips' statement concerning the blackout follows:

"It's true a 'surprise' blackout was staged only last week. We decided to repeat it immediately and before any information had an opportunity to leak out to civilian defense workers," he said.

"I drove through the downtown streets during the blackout, and found lights burning brightly in buildings throughout the area. Also I found many street lights still burning. The wardens failed to do their duty, and when I arrived at the control center, I found defense workers, instead of getting to their posts, were calling control center to learn the reason for the blackout.

"The blackout took everyone by surprise, and demonstrated beyond any shadow if a doubt that our organization needs more training. That training will begin immediately, for we don't know at what minute we are likely to get a genuine raid, and if it should come, we don't want any of the civilian defense workers calling control center to learn if there's any likelihood of a blackout."

8-Story Fall In Elevator Shaft Fatal

C. J. Sprague Killed in Accident in Atlanta Hotel.

As the terrifying aftermath of a dancing party, C. J. Sprague, 33, plunged eight stories to his death as he stepped into an elevator shaft in the Biltmore hotel yesterday.

Miss Ruth Wiebens, who accompanied Sprague and others and barely missed stepping into the open shaft herself, told police the man said "here's an elevator," pushed open the door and stepped into the shaft.

But D. O. Beusse, vice president and general manager of the hotel, said the door could not have been opened without exertion of a great deal of force and by one familiar with elevator operation.

Radio Patrolman W. R. Bailey, one of the investigating officers, said he checked on a report that Sprague had driven the elevator up to the eighth floor when he and his companions went to his room to get their coats and that a hotel attendant had meanwhile returned the elevator to the ground floor. He could find no witnesses to verify this, he said.

In her room at the Piedmont hotel, Miss Wiebens would not talk of the tragedy but a friend said "she doesn't feel that the reporters are the ones to clear it up."

As far as police could learn, Sprague has relatives in Canada. His automobile bore a Pennsylvania license plate. Both he and Miss Wiebens were employed by the Bell Aircraft Corporation, Bailey said. No coroner's inquest was planned.

Sprague's body was being held last night by Brandon-Bond-Condon, who said it probably would be taken to Buffalo, N. Y.

Army Opens Ranger School

MEMPHIS, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Second Army headquarters here announced today a second Army Ranger school—the first of its kind in the country—had been established to instruct Army men in the fine art of knockdown-and-drag-out combat.

The school, located at Camp Forrest, Tenn., is teaching its pupils everything from individual camouflage to how to disarm an opponent with a bayonet. The pupils, in turn, will return to their units to teach others Ranger tactics.

Some 637 picked men—about half are officers, the other half noncommissioned officers—are enrolled. Army officers said this would probably be the only class unless the Second Army requires other units necessitating more instructors.

Zeros Attack U.S. Bombers In Munda Area

Reports Indicate Japs Using Air Base Despite Bombings.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—New indications that the Japanese have succeeded in putting their Munda air base into effective operation despite persistent bombing by American planes were given today in a Navy communique reporting an attack by 12 enemy fighter craft on a flight of Dauntless divebombers in the central Solomons island.

Grumman Wildcat fighters protecting the dive-bombers shot down four of the Zeros. One of the Wildcats failed to return to its base.

The aerial engagement was fought Monday (Solomons time) and the same day, the communique reported, the Army's Martin Marauder medium bombers, with Airacobra fighter escort, attacked Munda but clouds "prevented accurate bombing and made observations difficult."

The attack by the 12 Zeros on the American flight occurred northwest of Gaudalcanal island over the waterway running between Santa Isabel island and the New Georgia group. The Munda base is located on the New Georgia group and a naval spokesman said it was probable that the Japanese planes were operating from there.

Munda, which is 180 miles from the Guadalcanal airfield, was developed by the Japanese last fall and American planes from Guadalcanal began attacking it in late Navember about the time it was being completed. Since then it has been bombed almost daily and, when weather conditions permitted observation, heavy damage was reported.

The Japanese, however, appeared to have been able to take advantage of the bad weather to repair much of the damage and run in fresh supplies to keep the base in operation.

Task of Finding Errol Flynn Jury Is Slow

Tentatively Selected Members After Two Days Mostly Women

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Women predominated in the jury box at the close of two days of questioning veniremen in the trial of Errol Flynn, movie actor, charged with three counts of assault.

After 19 prospective jurors had been examined by counsel for state and defendant, nine women and three men remained seated, all but one of the women having been accepted tentatively by both sides. Of the women, all but one are married or widowed. Questioning of the veniremen continued to give an occasional hint as to the nature of the evidence to be introduced by each side.

Defense Attorney Jerry Giesler emphasized the state must prove the two complaining witnesses—Betty Hansen, 17-year-old Lincoln (Neb.) schoolgirl, and Peggy La Rue Satterlee, 16-year-old Hollywood entertainer—were under 18 years of age.

Each side had exercised three of the peremptory challenges of the 10 it is allowed, and the laborious task of selecting the jury seemed likely to extend well into the third day of the trial.

Of the three veniremen peremptorily challenged by the state, two have relatives employed in the motion picture industry. Of the three prospective jurors removed from the box on peremptory defense challenges, two were elderly men, one a widower with a 40-year-old son and the other with only a wife.

Police Tighten Hunt for Slayer Of N. Y. Editor

Friends, Relatives of Anti-Fascist Chief To Be Questioned.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP)—Authorities today studied back copies and files of "Il Martello" (The Hammer) for clues that might lead to the slayer of its editor, anti-Fascist Carlo Tresca.

Tresca, once a leader of the Industrial Workers of the World who called Mussolini weak-tempered and vain, was felled by two bullets last night as he walked on lower Fifth Avenue.

Guiseppe Callabi, who was with the bearded, 58-year-old revolutionist at the time, was quoted by police as saying that at the corner of 15th street, a man opened fire behind them and escaped in a sedan.

Police said they found a car which might be the sedan. It was registered under a false address. Buildings in the vicinity of the killing were combed by police.

A loaded revolver was found nearby, indicating, police said, that assassins had lain in wait at both ends of the street where the newspaper building stands.

Meantime, numerous persons were being questioned at the district attorney's office, which said 30 subpoenas had been issued, with 20 more to come, so friends, relatives, associates and others known to have been with Tresca recently might be questioned.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan said Tresca, who called himself a "Syndicalist," was a "highly controversial person."

Acquaintances said he had many enemies. Expecting to be assassinated, Tresca once carried a gun, but gave that up when he shot himself accidentally.

WLB Demands End of Coal Miners' Strike

Vast Pennsylvania Industry May Face Seizure by U. S.

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Jan. 12.—(AP)—Pennsylvania's vast anthracite industry, beset by a wildcat strike of 19,000 miners, faced a possibility of government seizure tonight, as the War Labor Board demanded an immediate end to the walkout which, it said, had brought coal stocks to a level endangering prosecution of the war.

Shortly after the strike was certified to the WLB by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, the board sent telegrams to John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and heads of five anthracite companies, saying, "Unless this threat to the safety of our nation is immediately terminated, the board will exercise all powers within its jurisdiction to fulfill its obligations to the country."

The declaration was seen as an indication that the WLB would, if necessary, recommend that the President take over the mines in the name of the government. The 14-day-old strike has closed 15 of the industry's largest mines and created the worst anthracite shortage in years in the oil-rationed east.

Anthracite production last week, State Secretary of Mines Richard Maize said, totaled 700,000 tons, compared with a market demand of 1,100,000 tons. This week's demand is estimated at 1,400,000 tons.

The War Labor Board's action came only three days before a deadline fixed by the Tri-District Mine Committee for calling an industry-wide strike unless a 50-cent-a-month increase in dues is rescinded and operators meet demands for a flat $2 a day wage increase.

The Tri-District Mine Committee is an independent group within the ranks of the United Mine Workers district 7 and is not recognized by John L. Lewis, UMW chief. The UMW has denounced the walkout and repeatedly urged the men to resume production.

Train Accident Laid To Collapse of Span

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The Interstate Commerce Commission reported today that the derailment of a Southern Railway passenger train on a bridge north of Valdosta, Ga., on November 22, was caused by collapse of the span, which had been weakened by fire.

Two passengers and a rail worker were killed and 76 passengers and five workers were injured in the accident. The commission said it was unable to determine what caused the fire.

Court Hears State Case at Slaying Trial

Suspended Patrolman Is Charged With Murder of Prisoner.

A Fulton superior court heard yesterday the state's case against J. D. Adams, suspended Atlanta patrolman charged with the murder of Sam J. Simmons, a railroad man, last September 9.

The prosecution, conducted by Assistant Solicitor General E. E. Andrews and H. A. Allen, sought to prove that Simmons, in a state of inert intoxication, was brutally beaten to death by Adams in a police patrol car, after he had been picked up in a doorway on Marietta street.

The first witness was Dr. J. C. Blalock, physician to the coroner, who testified that Simmons died of a massive brain hemorrhage, apparently resulting from a half dozen or more blows from a blackjack.

Watchman Testifies.

The next was G. A. Cox, nightwatchman who called the police after seeing Simmons fall in a doorway. Cox said that he was apparently unconscious and that Adams and his partner, who answered the call, had to lift Simmons into their car. He said that Simmons showed no signs of resistance as he was driven off.

The state contended that a minute later Simmons, fatally beaten, was taken from the car, placed in a patrol wagon, and hurried to Grady hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

In his opening statement for the defense, James A. Branch said that he would prove that Simmons was a powerful man, that after being placed in the patrol car, he suddenly dragged Adams from the front seat of the car into the back and was kicking him in the stomach when the patrolman, in self defense, struck him with his blackjack.

Defense Witness.

The first witness for the defense was F. H. Weaver, former partner of Adams on the police force, but now a Marine.

He told of receiving the call to go to Marietta and Alexander streets for a "person down" and how he and Adams had unsuccessfully sought to rouse Simmons before lifting him into their car. Shortly afterwards, he said that Simmons began cursing, then kicked the back of the front seat of the car and pulled Adams over into the back of the car. He added that he stopped the car, got out and jerked Simmons' foot from Adams' stomach.

On cross-examination, Weaver identified a report of the occurrence made at police headquarters. This report recited that the patrol car had received the call at 1:07 a. m. and Simmons had been injured at 1:08. Weaver, however, said he believed more time had elapsed, since the car had been at Luckie street and North avenue when the call came.

At this point, Judge A. L. Etheridge, presiding, recessed court until this morning and instructed that the jury be locked up for the night.

Superhighway Through State Is Proposed

Plan Suggested as Cushion for Post-War Unemployment.

A superhighway through Georgia, part of a gigantic network of roads and landing fields located so that armed forces could be rushed to any coastal point on short notice, has been proposed as a means of cushioning post-war unemployment.

Representative Wene, Democrat, New Jersey, introduced such a bill in congress, The Constitution was informed in an Associated Press report from Washington yesterday. It is similar to one that died in the 77th congress, which envisaged an outlay of ten billion dollars with these objectives:

Ready After War.

1—Defense of the nation in time of threatened invasion.

2—Absorption of the unemployed on this public project when the war ends.

3—Expansion of the highway systems and airport facilities to handle anticipated increases in flow in the peacetime years.

Wene said the work should be planned and organized now so that it would be ready for operation at the close of the war.

The program would eliminate "all need of dole, relief or charity to any able-bodied citizen," the author declared, and provide the nation with the "greatest transportation system ever built."

A federal commission would be established to build the network which would have these main routes:

Portland, Me., west to Boston, New York, Trenton, N. J., Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, through West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Colorado, Utah and Nevada with the terminus at San Francisco.

Georgia Linked.

Between Woodbridge and New Brunswick, N. J., southwest to Atlantic City and Cape May, N. J.

Philadelphia southwest to Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Va., and through the Carolinas, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, to San Diego and Los Angeles.

Boston to Albany, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester and Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland and Toledo, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and St. Paul, throuth North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Seattle and Portland and south to San Francisco.

Washington southwesterly through Tennessee and Arkansas and joining the southern route in Texas.

Buffalo southeasterly to Harrisburg and Philadelphia and thence to the Jersey coast at Atlantic City.

Includes Atlanta.

Chicago southeast to Indianapolis, Louisville, Knoxville, Atlanta and Miami, joining with another link from Detroit south.

Chicago southwest to St. Louis, Springfield, Mo., Oklahoma City and El Paso, Texas.

Chicago northwest to near Des Moines, Iowa, Omaha, and Denver.

Minneapolis south to near St. Louis, Memphis, Tenn., and New Orleans.

North Dakota south through South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma to Galveston, Texas.

Toll Imposed.

Montana south through Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and terminating at El Paso.

Branch routes would be extended from the main lines to every state capital and main industrial centers.

A system of toll charges would be imposed to help amortize the bond issues.

No advertising signs would be permitted along the so-called "superhighways." Grades and curves would be reduced to a minimum. Emergency airplane landing fields would be built along the system at frequent intervals where the terrain permitted.

'Bugs' Baer Says:

I went into the butcher's yesterday and said, "I would like a pound of the very best, fresh, grade A, country, creamery butter."

The butcher leaned out of his apron and said, "You forgot to say apple."

That's what I got. Apple butter.

Now I see they are going to take up the ration cards and install the point system used in England, Russia, Germany and Italy.

I'll explain the point system. You go into a grocery store and look over the shelves. Then you point at something you want but you don't get it.

Dutch Publish Losses In Guerrilla Warfare

MELBOURNE, Jan. 12.—(AP)—The Royal Netherlands East Indies army lost 159 officers and men, both Dutch and Indonesian, in fighting on islands north of Australia, in the last half of 1942, an official statement said today.

Most of the losses, it said, occurred in guerrilla operations on various islands.

In one fight the Japanese left 200 dead on the battlefield, while Dutch losses were six men, it added.
